MAYOR WON'T ACCEPT THE BUILDING CODE

Intimates That He Will Cut Out Many of Its Sections, If He Does Not Veto It All.

HEARING FOR OPPONENTS

Builders, Workers, and Fire Underwriters Urge Mr. McClellan Not to Sign It—Supporters Heard To-day.

Mayor McClellan personally presided yesterday at the hearing on the proposed new Building Code called by Acting Mayor McGowan a week ago. Instead of allowing each side of the argument an hour each, the time allotted them by Mr. McGowan, the Mayor sat from 10 o'clock in the morning until 5 in the afternoon. He took up the code section by section, hearing those who are opposed to the code, and then announced that to-day he will give the defenders of the document an equal chance to be heard.

The Mayor's attitude caused decided uneasiness about the City Hall. He made it very clear that he will undoubtedly veto certain important sections of the code, and frankly expressed himself as in doubt as to whether what would be left of the code would be sufficient to serve as an administrative document. This led to the speculation that he might finally decide to veto the code in its entirety. He would not personally say, however, just what his action will probably be.

"Under the Charter," said he, "I am permitted to accept or discard such parts of the code as I please."

The Mayor declared most emphatically that no one had persuaded him to come back to the city to pass upon the code, but that he had returned of his own free will. He pointed out that he had understood, when he went away, that the Aldermen were not to take final action on the code until Fall.

Why the Mayor Came Back.

"I was thirty miles away from both telephone and telegraph communication," said he, "and I would not have known of the passage of the code had not Mr. Crowell written me about it. Then I realized that the responsibility was mine and that I should accept it at once. No one advised or persuaded me to come back to the city except George B. McClellan, and I respected his invitation."

C. B. J. Snyder, Superintendent of Buildings of the Board of Education; Nelson P. Lewis, Chief Engineer of the Board of Estimate, and Assistant Corporation Counsel Crowell, selected as experts by Mr. McGowan to advise him on the code, sat beside the Mayor yesterday during the hearing.

Lawrence Veiller of the Tenement House Commission, was the first speaker. He pointed out that the code is not clear in its references to the State tenement house law, and asked that this be changed by certain amendments.

William Butler, counsel for the Building Trades Employers' Association, objected to the powers granted by the code to the Superintendent of Buildings. This point was also taken up by several other speakers.

Ernest Flagg, the architect, was another opponent of the code. He pointed out that cinder concrete, which is barred by the new code, because it was thought that unsuitable cinders might be used in making it, is just as safe as any other kind of building material if the proper cinders are used.

Mr. Flagg also criticised the code for placing "unrestricted powers in the hands of the Superintendent of Buildings," and for its "entire lack of suitable regulations for providing light for the streets and buildings."

"I do not think you ought to sign this code," he continued, "and I trust that if you do refuse to do so another one may be prepared drawn up on entirely different lines from this. A code which is not a cumbersome treatise on construction, but which is a simple measure designed to secure safe building, leaving to the individual builder the freest possible scope which is consistent with the public good and affording every proper inducement for the use of incombustible materials in preference to wood."

Prof. Burr Defends Concrete.

Prof. Burr of Columbia, who was one of the principal speakers at the protest mass meeting against the code at Cooper Union on Tuesday night, spoke particularly against the limitation placed upon the height of reinforced concrete buildings. The professor was questioned closely by the Mayor, who asked him if he did not believe some limit should be placed on the height to which reinforced concrete buildings can be constructed. Prof. Burr replied emphatically in the negative, declaring that if proper care was taken there should be no reason why buildings of this type should not go to any height.

He was followed by J. P. H. Perry of the Turner Construction Company, a reinforced concrete concern, who declared that a committee appointed by the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Society of Testing Materials, the American Railway, Engineering, and Maintenance of Way Association, and the Association of American Portland Cement Manufacturers has drawn specifications for the construction of reinforced concrete buildings in which no limit is placed on the height.

Mr. Flagg also spoke on this point, declaring that "this code places a premium on the use of inflammable material in buildings." He stated that the code would deter the increase in the use of the "greatest discovery that has ever happened in the building field."

Fire Underwriters Against It.

C. F. Shallcross of the New York Board of Fire Underwriters objected to the fire limit provisions of the code, saying:

"The New York Board of Fire Underwriters very strongly urged that provision be made in the code that in a certain defined area in the Borough of Manhattan below Fifty-ninth Street, no high buildings hereafter to be erected should be other than fireproof if occupied for mercantile or manufacturing purposes. Such a provision was very properly incorporated in the proposed code, but for some reason it has recently been stricken out.

"The New York Board of Fire Underwriters believes that the commercial interests of the city would be immensely protected and benefited by such a provision, as it would eventually tend to confine the limits of a sweeping fire, and to that extent would relieve the community from its share of the loss which it would have to sustain over and above the amount which the fire insurance companies would be able to pay in the event of such a conflagration."

F. R. Ryan was one of the first speakers against the cinder concrete provision

LARGER STOCKHOLDING LISTS.

Commerce Board Likely to Demand Names of Fifty from Railroads.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—In sending out the call for the annual reports of railroads the Inter-State Commerce Commission has given notice to the roads that they will not be required this year to include in their reports the names of their ten largest stockholders. The commission reserves the right, however, to call upon the roads, if it shall be deemed desirable, for the names of the fifty largest stockholders.

In calling for the names of the ten largest stockholders last year the commission had the idea that such information would enable its statistician, Prof. Henry C. Adams, to secure a fairly accurate line upon the principal railroad ownership of the United States, and especially that it would reveal the small groups or combinations, if there were any such, that owned the main systems. But the information conveyed by the lists when filed was very far from satisfactory for such a purpose. There were large blocks of stock in nearly all the principal systems obviously held by dummies. Names were reported which had seldom been heard of in the financial world, and men were represented as owning thousands of shares of railroad stocks who notoriously had nothing whatever to say in the management of the roads.

Some situations which appeared curious were revealed, such, for instance, as the apparently outholding by Mr. Harriman of Mr. Hill in one of the Hill roads.

The tabulation of the annual reports of last year which Prof. Adams has been working out, with his own report on the information obtained, is not yet ready for distribution. Chairman Knapp of the Commerce Commission said this evening that it had been decided by the commission that it would not be worth while to call for similar lists this year. But the commission has not abandoned the effort to find out who own the roads, and therefore reserved the right to call for the names of the fifty largest stockholders.

No instructions have yet been given or decided upon with reference to any particular road, and no call for the fifty names has gone out. Mr. Knapp said it might be that none would go. The matter is yet to be determined by the commission. Such a call would produce lists running down to holders of very small amounts of stock in most of the roads of the country. It was observable in the lists of ten that often the last name was credited with comparatively few shares, and if lists of fifty are called for they will show a good many names holding under 100 share lots.

BURGLAR ONCE A BANK CLERK.

Ralph Sherman, Caught at Arverne, Had $5,000 Job Five Years Ago.

In the police station at Rockaway Beach is Ralph Sherman, who, five years ago, received $5,000 a year for handling the foreign correspondence of a well-known banking firm in William Street. Yesterday he was charged with burglary, and to Capt. Halpin he admitted, the Captain says, that he has served time in the Elmira Reformatory, and that his picture is in the Rogues' Gallery.

Sherman is charged with robbing Arthur Lethbridge, a guest at the Rochford Hotel, at Straiton Avenue and the Boulevard, Arverne, and the home of Reuben Sagowsky, a wealthy cloak and suit manufacturer of 546 Broadway, whose Summer home is at 106 Sea View Avenue, Arverne. He was captured yesterday by Detective Loughlin and Policeman Warner.

Loughlin was searching for the burglar, and when he encountered Sherman in the Boulevard he thought that the furtive glances the man cast on all sides made him worthy of suspicion. At last he decided to accost him, and asked Warner to stand by for trouble. It was well that he did, for Sherman, when Loughlin suggested that he accompany him to the station, started to run, and when the detective tripped him showed fight. With Warner's help he was taken to the station house, however, and there, according to the police, the jewelry missing from the Sagowsky home and from Mr. Lethbridge's room was found.

Sherman then admitted the thefts, say the police, and explained how he had accomplished them. According to the police he declared that on Sunday morning about 9:30 o'clock he climbed up on the porch of the Rochford Hotel, depending upon any one who saw him mistaking him for an employe, and then wandered over the porchtop until he came to the open window of Mr. Lethbridge's room, which he entered.

He took a watch worth $75 and six pins worth $225 from a dresser, and then stepped back on the porch in full view of many people in the street below and, walking around to the back of the house, slid down from the porch and made off. Mr. Lethbridge was in swimming when the robbery occurred.

Yesterday morning Sherman entered the Sagowsky home by a rear door and made his way to Mrs. Sagowsky's room on the second floor, where he took Mr. Sagowsky's watch and chain worth $150, Mrs. Sagowsky's watch worth $100, a diamond and ruby bracelet worth $300, a gold purse worth $25, a $10 purse containing a $5 gold piece, and some other trinkets. He got out of the house safely, and was walking toward Far Rockaway when he was discovered and caught.

Beyond his connection with the banking firm, which Sherman told himself, the police could learn little about him. In his pocket was a card bearing his name and the statement "translator of languages, 172 Central Park West." Sherman admitted that he had lived there once, but said it was some time ago. He said that he was born in Russia, and then suddenly declined to tell any more about himself.

He will be arraigned in the Rockaway Police Court this morning.

NOT FLIRTING WITH GAYNOR.

Cohalan Denies That Murphy Sent Him to Offer Mayoralty Nomination.

Emphatic denial was made yesterday of a report that Daniel F. Cohalan, the confidential adviser of Tammany Leader Charles F. Murphy, had made three visits within the last few weeks to the Summer home of Justice William J. Gaynor at St. James, L. I., to offer him the Tammany nomination for Mayor.

"I have not seen Judge Gaynor for months," said Mr. Cohalan, "and I certainly have never talked to him about the Mayoralty nomination. The report is false from beginning to end."

When Mr. Cohalan was asked whether there had been more discussion of Gaynor of late in the Mayoralty talk going on in the inner circles of Tammany Hall than there was before the removal of Police Commissioner Bingham, he said he was not willing to say anything about it.

Some people who ought to know said yesterday that Mr. Murphy is no more for Justice Gaynor for Mayor than Justice Gaynor is for Mr. Murphy for boss.

If the Tammany leader should be caught flirting with the Brooklyn Justice just now, it was said, it would be purely with a view of worrying Senator McCarren, Judge Gaynor being very popular with the Democrats and independent voters in Brooklyn.

There is a certain element which, Murphy believes, he might lure away from the McCarren fold if he could convince Brooklynites that he "saw Justice Gaynor first."

TAFT'S DINNER FAILS TO BREAK DEADLOCK

House and Senate Leaders Tell Him His Programme Cannot Be Carried Out.

CANVASSES WILL BE MADE

Opponents of Free Hides May Be Placated by Reductions on Manufactures—Tawney Supports Payne.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—President Taft's general round-up of the tariff conferrees and his personal tariff advisers took place at the White House this evening. He had all the members of both Conference Committees, with the exception of Senator Cullom, as his guests at dinner, together with some of the Cabinet and his special helpers in the Senate and House.

When dinner was over about half past nine the party went to the south portico and sat for about two hours discussing, in small groups, the Tariff bill in its different phases.

The conference ended at 11:30 o'clock with the disputes over raw materials no nearer adjustment. Only one question was determined beyond appeal, and that was that the conferrees must settle their own differences. Pains were taken, however, to convey the impression that this decision was not indicative of any absence of appreciation of the President's efforts. It merely confirmed what the "elder statesmen" had asserted from the first—that tariff making was trading, and the shrewdest dealer and the strongest section were bound to get the best of the argument.

Could Not Promise the Votes.

Briefly stated, the representatives of the House and Senate practically admitted that they were unable to forecast the outcome. Senator Aldrich spoke for the Senate, and Speaker Cannon and Representative Dwight, the Republican whip, for the House. Mr. Dwight spoke of the insurgent movement organized by the "anti-free raw material" faction in the House, but he was not ready to estimate the strength of this movement.

Representative Payne expressed the opinion that the conference report carrying free iron ore, coal, hides, and oil could be adopted in the House, but he said that he had not canvassed the situation.

Senator Aldrich was very positive in the opinion that such a report would fail in the Senate, but he thought there could be reductions made in the Senate rates, with perhaps iron ore and oil transferred to the free list, without endangering its adoption.

Apparently the President realized that the time had not yet arrived to call for a decision on the subject of raw materials. It is stated that he did not press the representatives of either House or Senate for more definite statements of the situation in the respective branches of Congress.

The customs court and the corporation tax amendments were discussed at length. Most of those present agreed with President Taft that the Customs Court should be situated in Washington since it is to be a court of appeals, whose decisions will be final. Senator Hale dissented from this opinion on the ground that a large majority of the cases originate in New York, and the evidence is more readily available in that city. Attorney General Wickersham and Senator Root, who drew the customs court amendment, favored Washington rather than New York as headquarters for the court.

The discussion of the corporation tax dealt with the revenue it would produce and the general effect of the tax, from a political point of view.

Some of the conferrees said after the dinner that no conference report would be signed until both houses had been canvassed to the probability of its being adopted. No one can say how much this will delay adjournment of the tariff session. Mr. Fordney was confident, however, that an adjournment could be reached by Saturday.

The complete list of those at the President's dinner was: Vice President Sherman, Speaker Cannon, Secretary MacVeagh, Attorney General Wickersham, Senators Hale, Aldrich, Burrows, Penrose, Crane, and Root; Representatives Dalzell, Payne, McCall, Boutell, Calderhead, Fordney, and Dwight, and Capt. Butt.

Dinner on the Roof.

It was an al fresco dinner, given on the roof of the western wing, where Mr. Taft has had a number of similar entertainments. The avowed purpose of the affair was to straighten out as many tangles in the tariff situation as possible, and that accounted for the presence of Secretary MacVeagh and Attorney General Wickersham with Senators Root and Crane and Mr. Dwight, the Republican whip of the House, in addition to the Speaker and Vice President Sherman.

Since his return from Massachusetts on Monday morning Senator Crane has been especially busy taming the new band of Senate insurgents. Senator Root has been working with Attorney General Wickersham on the corporation tax, and also lending a helping hand on the schedules in controversy. Mr. Dwight has been making a canvass of the House Republicans, and it was through his reports that the President was informed of the willingness of the House to stand by him in whatever he decided to be the best thing to demand in the way of revision downward.

Before he held the big conference Mr. Taft had apparently assured free hides by the use of his direct influence. This was a matter that had been left to him, it being said that the conferrees would grant his demands if he could make certain that a report providing for free hides would be accepted by Congress.

The President, as indicated in these dispatches last night, worked on a proposition which carried with free hides concessions to the cattle men in the form of material reductions in leather and leather goods—in many cases below even the House rates. Senators Crane and Curtis were the President's chief emissaries in

FERRYBOAT IN CRASH WITH RIVER LINER

Women's Cabin Smashed In at a Point Just Vacated by Two Passengers.

200 ABOARD BADLY SCARED

Poughkeepsie Keeps on Her Way and New Brunswick Is Able to Make Her Slip—None Badly Hurt.

In midstream between the Manhattan and the Jersey shore the Poughkeepsie of the Central Hudson Steamboat Line and the ferryboat New Brunswick of the Pennsylvania Railroad service came together in collision just before 5:30 o'clock last night, and although the sheathing of the waist of the New Brunswick, as that part of the vessel is known which extends from the guardrail to the upper deck, and in which are the windows of the cabin, was smashed in by the Poughkeepsie's bow, only 3 women of the 200 passengers on the ferryboat were endangered. Two of these escaped practically unhurt, and the third was only bruised by being flung to the deck.

The accident occurred when the boats were about off Christopher Street, and apparently can be attributed chiefly to the vagaries of the tide at that point. The New Brunswick, in charge of Master Thomas Barton, had left her slip at Twenty-third Street at 5:10 o'clock for the Pennsylvania station in Jersey City, when a press of small craft in the water ahead made Capt. Barton swing over toward the Jersey shore.

His course took the New Brunswick across the path of the Poughkeepsie, which was proceeding up the river, and once out of the larger vessel's way Capt. Barton headed down stream again. Ahead of him, however, was another congestion of small craft, and the Captain rang to the engine room to slow down.

With her headway nearly spent, the New Brunswick floated slowly down stream, and here it was that the tide effected its work, for, with the Poughkeepsie approaching close alongside, apparently with room to pass, the stern of the New Brunswick, with no headway to steady her, was suddenly swept around directly into the approaching steamer's path

Most of the 200 passengers were on the upper deck, from which point they saw the danger of the impending collision. The majority of them ran to the starboard side of the boat, while several procured life preservers from the racks near by, fearful of the extent of the threatened impact.

Capt. Barton had seen the danger, too, but to start ahead with speed enough to pull the New Brunswick out of danger was impossible because of the boats directly ahead. Capt. George Greenwich, on the Poughkeepsie, was likewise powerless to turn out to starboard because of the presence there of the other collection of craft.

Capt. Barton ordered his officers to clear the port side of the ferryboat of passengers and then endeavored to swing his vessel around, hoping to minimize the damage of the collision by letting the boats meet at a sharp angle with a glancing blow.

The women's cabin is on the port side of the New Brunswick, and although nearly all the passengers on the upper deck had hurried to the starboard rail, there still remained in the cabin below three women, Miss Bessie Tisdale, 19 years old, of 320 Whiton Street; Miss Madeline Miller, 20, of 299 Barrow Street, and Mrs. John Rutledge, 32, of 209 Warren Street, all of Jersey City.

The first two, who are stenographers in the Wells-Fargo Express Company's office in Twenty-second Street, were seated on the water side of the cabin, while Mrs. Rutledge had a seat on the inside further aft. None of the three suspected the danger until a deckhand poked his head through the door and shouted to the two stenographers: "Get over on the other side of the boat, quick!"

Miss Tisdale and Miss Miller sprang up, and, glancing through a window, saw the white bulk of the Poughkeepsie's bow as it bore down on the New Brunswick almost at the very spot where they had been sitting. Screaming, the girls ran, Miss Tisdale toward the stern and Miss Miller toward the stairway amidships which leads to the upper deck. Miss Tisdale had reached the after deck and Miss Miller the first landing on the stairway when the collision came.

There was a crash, the sound of wood and iron rent and bent, and the glass of a dozen windows fell inward and shattered on the floor. Like many of the other passengers, Miss Miller was thrown down, falling on the stairs leading to the upper deck. As she regained her feet and fled to the deck above, the Poughkeepsie sheered off and was continuing her way up the river.

Aboard the New Brunswick it was discovered quickly that the boat was in no danger. Officers and deckhands reassured the passengers, and then Capt. Barton led the way to the cabin. On the floor, unconscious, they came upon Mrs. Rutledge. She was carried into a cabin and revived by other women passengers.

When the New Brunswick reached her slip in Jersey City Mrs. Rutledge, by order of Capt. Charles Carroll, Superintendent of the ferry system, was taken to the Emergency Hospital in the station. After the physicians had examined her it was said that she was suffering chiefly from fright. Mrs. Rutledge, Miss Tisdale, and Miss Miller, were sent to their homes in a carriage.

Mrs. Rutledge was very nervous and could tell nothing of her experience except that after she heard the deckhand shout the Poughkeepsie had crashed into the New Brunswick directly opposite where she was standing, and she had been thrown to the floor, unconscious.

The force of the shock was sufficient to break or loosen several of the wooden supports of the women's cabin, and as a result the flooring of the upper deck sagged downward somewhat above this point. Nevertheless the New Brunswick, with the damaged part roped off, was kept in commission until 8:10, her regular time for laying off. She will be taken to the repair docks to-day.

At the office of the Central Hudson Steamboat Company last night it was said that no word of the accident had been received there, and that Capt. Greenwich's report would be filed in Newburg. Apparently the Poughkeepsie was not damaged.

J. P. MORGAN HOME WITH ART TREASURES

Arrives on the Majestic, Bringing $30,000 Worth Collected in Europe.

OPTIMISTIC ON BUSINESS

Says It's Only a Question of Time Before Steel Will Be Listed in Paris.

J. Pierpont Morgan, the banker, was the first man to walk down the gang plank of the White Star steamship Majestic when she docked at 9:30 last night at the foot of Christopher Street. He brought with him $30,000 worth of art objects, the promise that Americans would have a chance to see part of his European collection when the Hudson-Fulton exhibition begins, and the half-prophecy that it is but a question of time before Steel common will be listed on the Paris Bourse.

He would speak only generally on questions of business and finance, saying that conditions in Europe seemed good and that in England he had seen no evidence of unusual business depression. The reporters found him seated alone on the starboard side of the promenade deck. He greeted them genially, and after saying that he was in good health and ready for work, one of them asked him:

"If the present tariff goes through will it not enable you to bring your art collection here from England?"

"Well," said Mr. Morgan, "they look pretty good where they are."

"Yes, but if there is no duty will we have a chance to see them? The people here would certainly like to see them."

"They will have a chance," said Mr. Morgan. "They will have a good chance to see some of the collection in September at the Hudson-Fulton exhibition."

"How about Sir Purdon Clarke? Is the report true that he will not come back to the Metropolitan Museum of Art?"

"So far as I know," answered the banker, "there is no truth in it. He went over there to get well, and if he does get well he will come back here."

"What about Steel common?" asked a reporter. "It closed to-day at 71½."

"No," said Mr. Morgan, instantly, glancing at the questioner, "it was 70½."

Then everybody smiled, and Mr. Morgan was asked: "Do you think you will succeed in listing Steel common in France?"

"That," he answered, "is in the hands of the French Government."

"Well, do you think," asked another, "that the change in the administration there will make a difference regarding it?"

"I don't know about that," answered Mr. Morgan, "but I think it will come out all right. I think it's only a question of time before it will be listed."

Mr. Morgan denied that he had been summoned home to consult about the negotiations for the Chinese railroad loan.

"I don't know anything about the loan. That matter is being handled entirely in this country."

Mr. Morgan said he was not prepared to say what would be done about the dividend on Steel common.

"That matter has not been talked over with me, so I am in no position to talk about it," was his only comment.

The crowd waiting on the pier saw Mr. Morgan standing at the other end, while the gangplank was being adjusted. He wore a high-crowned panama hat, a dark gray suit, and carried a cane, and as he strode down the plank—the first man to land—he looked much younger than he usually appears.

He was surrounded by members of his firm and others. There were Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee and her two children, H. B. Holland, Charles Steele, A. J. Davison, and Mr. Morgan's son Jack.

Mr. Morgan met them laughing and embraced and kissed his son. Mr. Holland, after shaking his hand, held out a long, black cigar, which Mr. Morgan took, remarking:

"I had some with me on the boat, but they got damp, and I'm glad to get this one."

He then went aboard his yacht, the Corsair, which, meeting the steamer at Quarantine, had sailed up the harbor with her. He said he would go to his office in the morning. His art objects are in twelve cases and they will be released as soon as he files a bond.

The Majestic brought news from E. H. Harriman. Dr. Dixon, his physician, who left him recently, was in Mr. Morgan's party. Dr. Dixon said he had seen Mr. Harriman at Badgastein, Austria.

"There is nothing organic the matter with him," said he. "He has had a long time of work and now he needs a long time of rest—that's all. No special trouble at all; his spine is all right. It is simply a case of overwork, and only rest can mend it. I left him automobiling and having a good time."

Among other well-known persons arriving were William M. Laffan of The New York Sun, Alfredo de Artiaga, Argentine Consul General to Venezuela; Prof. Robert K. Duncan of the University of Kansas, Bessie McCoy of the Three Twins Company, and her sister.

In the freight was the Persian cat Rob Roy II., which was purchased recently in England for a Mrs. Lynas of Chicago for $525.

REVOLVER DUEL IN BANK.

President of St. Louis Bank Forced to Deliver $365 in Personal Quarrel.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 21.—A revolver duel between S. S. Seelig, President of the Savings Trust Company, Delmar and Alberts Avenues, and M. L. Dawson, a real estate man, occurred in front of the trust company at 2:50 P. M. to-day. Dawson had covered Seelig with a revolver and forced the bank President to hand him $365. The exchange of shots took place immediately after Dawson had stepped out of the bank. Dawson fired once, and Seelig replied with two shots. Neither man was struck.

Dawson walked into the bank as Seelig was standing in the middle of the corridor outside the screened cashier's desk. Seelig, under cover of Dawson's revolver, got the $365 which the latter had demanded and handed it to the real estate agent. Dawson backed out of the bank, still pointing his revolver at Seelig, who, disregarding the weapon, stepped coolly to his own desk and picked up a revolver. As Dawson disappeared through the door Seelig ran after him.

Seelig leveled his weapon at the real estate man, and Dawson, seeing the movement, fired a shot at him. Seelig shot twice as Dawson darted back of a sheltering bank wall, where he remained until two policemen, one on a motor cycle and one patrolman on foot, who were attracted by the shots, went into the alley and arrested him. He did not resist.

The shooting attracted a large crowd to the bank and Dawson was led through a mass of people to a police call box. Seelig went over to the Newstad Avenue Police Station to appear against Dawson there.

The cashier of the bank declared the quarrel was a personal one.

HARRIMAN ABLE TO WORK.

Gives Attention to Business Affairs with Physician's Permission.

GASTIEN, Austria, July 21.—E. H. Harriman's health continues to show improvement.

He is now giving up a small portion of his time to his business affairs, with the permission of his physician.

TAFT SEES HIMSELF TALK.

Visits a Moving Picture Show to See Record of His Speech.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—President Taft attended a special performance at one of the moving-picture theatres in this city this afternoon to witness the pictures made of him during his trip to Petersburg, Va., in May last.

The President was especially interested in the film taken of him while he was delivering an address, it being the first time he had ever seen himself in action. He was accompanied to the theatre by Capt. Butts, his military aid.

HIS WIFE WON'T LET HIM.

Wife of Justice Brewer Won't Let Her Husband Retire from the Bench.

MILWAUKEE, July 21.—In his address before the Association of Agents of the Northwestern Mutual Life Company of this city to-day, of which he is a Trustee, Justice David J. Brewer of the United States Supreme Court said:

"Under the hue and cry of to-day we must have an income tax, which means a tax upon all income, and if that power to tax all income is given the Government we will see the States taxed not out of their existence but out of their vitality. The idea leads up to the question of placing the entire power in the control of the Nation, and the State is left out of the matter."

With reference to his remaining a member of the Supreme Court, Justice Brewer said:

"There are four men on the Supreme bench who could retire. I told my wife I should retire because the statute said I could do so. 'I don't care what the statute says, you can't do it,' she said. That seemed to settle my status."

AMERICANS UNDERBID BRITISH

Australia Reluctantly Compelled to Give Them Contract for Factory.

MELBOURNE, Australia, July 21.—Official papers have been issued, explaining the acceptance by the Commonwealth Government of the tender of Pratt & Whitney, an American firm, for the erection of a small arms factory in Australia for the Government. They show that the British firms which made tenders were hopelessly outclassed with regard to both price and time.

One English tender was $500,000, as against $340,000 bid by the Americans, and required three years to build, as compared with the American firm's one year. The Americans allege that the British rifle factories are twenty years behind the modern Continental arsenals.

Questioned in Parliament with regard to the contract, the Minister of Defense, Joseph Cook, said he would willingly have made sacrifices to give the work to a British firm, but he was obliged to accept the American tender, as its conditions all around were so much better.

DR. HUNTINGTON NEAR DEATH.

May Linger a Few Days—Feared That He Has Cancer.

NAHANT, Mass., July 21.—The life of Dr. William R. Huntington, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, New York, was believed to-night to be very near its close, although the attending physician said his patient might possibly linger yet for two or three days. The battle which Dr. Huntington is making against the approach of death is a determined one, and although his condition seems at a very low ebb he still retains consciousness.

Royal Robbins, son-in-law of Dr. Huntington, to-day expressed the belief that the patient was suffering from cancer. The reason for the belief was not given by Mr. Robbins.

Dr. Huntington understands that there is no hope of recovery, but he has expressed a strong wish to see once more his daughter, Margaret, who is crossing the Atlantic on the Lusitania, hastening to her father. She is expected Friday. Members of Dr. Huntington's family believe that he is buoyed up by an earnest determination to live if possible until his daughter's arrival.

Dr. Frederick Winslow, Dr. Huntington's physician, said that the patient had failed since yesterday. Dr. Winslow would not discuss the theory advanced by the members of the family that Dr. Huntington was suffering from cancer.

SLAYER REVEALED IN A DREAM

So Says E. H. Janney, Off to Europe to Hunt Him Down.

The sailing yesterday on the Cunard Line steamship Campania of G. H. Janney, vowing that he was going abroad to kill the murderer of his brother-in-law, G. D. Spencer of Martinsville, Va., recalls one of the famous murder mysteries of that city. Janney, who lives in Montgomery, Ala., boarded the steamer at the last minute.

When the Spencers left their homestead in Martinsville, Va., some years ago, for Danville, Janney said he was asked to care for the place. He could not do so, and Spencer remained behind. According to Janney's story Spencer was found in bed one morning shot through the head. He recovered consciousness enough to say that he had been awakened by a hand groping over his bed. He thought it was the cat, and made a motion to push the animal to the floor. At that instant a man grabbed his arm, pulled him upright in bed and shot him.

Janney declared yesterday that the name of the murderer had recently been revealed to him in a dream, and that the murderer was now abroad.

Special to The New York Times.

DANVILLE, Va., July 21.—Close relatives of John D. Spencer said to-night that they placed no credence in the story that G. F. Janney, his brother-in-law, had located the murderer of Spencer in Europe, and that Janney had sailed to-day to avenge his death.

Spencer, who was one of the best known tobacconists in the South, was shot by a negro burglar at Martinsville, Va., on July 21, 1905, dying about two months later in a Baltimore hospital. Several suspects were arrested, but later released. Big rewards, including one by Gov. Montague, were offered for the capture of Spencer's murderer.

The search for Spencer's slayer has been abandoned as hopeless, and relatives say that the story about any suspect being in Europe is preposterous.

CUSTOMS THIEVES CAUGHT IN A TRAP

LOOT WORTH THOUSANDS

Secret Investigators Found That Goods Were Stolen on Ferryboats and Saw Cases Robbed—After "Fence" Now

In the arrest of four men yesterday the customs officials at this port believe that they have stopped effectually a leak by which goods worth hundreds of thousands of dollars have been stolen immediately after arrival in this country. These thefts have been under investigation for weeks. Yesterday, after long and patient watching, a trap was sprung and the prisoners gathered in. So unwilling, however, were the customs officials to have the matter made public before the men were arraigned before Commissioner Shields today that the prisoners were locked up in different police stations.

The men under arrest are John Miller of 306 West 144th Street and William Corbin of 443 West 17th Street, truck drivers for Hess & Co., the contractors who convey goods from the steamship piers to the Appraiser's Stores; Walter Bruce of 453 West 16th Street, alleged to be the intermediary between the thieves and the "fence," and Nicholas Griffin, truck driver for a big mercantile concern. The arrests were made by special agents of the Department of Justice.

Many of the complaints received by Collector Loeb since he took office have come from importers who declared that they were suffering a shortage in goods received, although invoices and manifests showed that these goods had left the other side intact. Customs men were assigned to look into the complaints, but could not solve the mystery, and the thefts continued unchecked.

This was the condition when the Collector and his solicitor, Harrison Osborne, after a conference, decided to tackle the job themselves. C. C. Wall of the Special Agents' office, an old time Secret Service man, was called in to assist them. On his recommendation E. J. Loud of the Solicitor's office and George M. Kennoch, George Dyer, and Charles Culley of the Department of Justice were assigned to the case. They were detailed for the work under a special arrangement with Mr. De Belle, agent in charge of the New York office of the Federal Department of Justice.

Stolen on the Ferryboats.

For many days the agents watched the steamship piers and the Public Stores. They soon became convinced that the thefts were not committed in either of these places. Then they tried another theory. This was that the goods disappeared between the piers and the Public Stores. Investigation along this line, under the supervision of Mr. Harrison and Mr. Loud, brought unexpected results.

It was found that goods shipped on steamships landing in Hoboken and Jersey City were the most likely to disappear, so attention was turned in the direction of New Jersey. And somewhere over there the investigators got a tip as to how goods disappeared.

Those who have crossed on the Hoboken ferryboats within the last few days might have noted two or three men who appeared to be such lovers of horses that they never left the truck runways all the way across, and keenly inspected the good points of each truck horse that took its weary way on board. These men were Wall's force of detectives. They had learned that it was on the Hoboken ferryboats that cases were opened and goods abstracted without interference.

Watched Thefts in Progress.

For days they watched, and in that time it is said they saw the thieves open more than one case, take what they wanted, and then nail up the case again. Nevertheless the agents waited until they knew how the thieves worked, from the actual commission of the thefts to the disposal of the goods.

Yesterday afternoon the time was ripe for making the arrests. After watching still another transfer of goods from a case on one truck to another, the agents swooped down upon the offenders. Miller was the driver arrested. He had driven his truck laden with cases of goods that had come in on the North German Lloyd steamship Kaiser Wilhelm II. from the North German Lloyd pier. The watchers saw him hand a hammer to Bruce and point to a case on his truck.

When the boat was out in the river the agents say Bruce opened a case and took from it seven pieces, each containing sixty-one yards of cheviot. These goods were put on Griffin's truck, which was empty and drawn up alongside. The case on Miller's truck was then nailed up.

Agents Kennoch and Dyer followed the truck containing the abstracted cloth. Where this was finally overtaken the officials would not say last night. It was admitted that their journey had been a long way across town and that the Government men had to take a cab to keep up with Griffin and his load. Once they thought the plan had gone wrong, for the truckman drove by a devious route, and in a congestion of traffic they lost their man.

There followed some quick scouting about, but the cabman picked up the quarry again in less than a block from where they had lost the trail, and presently the agents saw the truck stop before a certain place, and the men begin to unload the cheviot. Their arrest followed. The agents talked with the Custom House over the telephone, and were instructed by the Collector's office to have the men locked up for arraignment to-day.

When the first two prisoners were safely in custody, Wall, the moving spirit in the investigation, went to the Public Stores. There he found the truck driver Corbin and arrested him. He was not immediately involved in the theft which led to the other arrests, but it is charged that he was one of the offenders who had come under suspicion in the days while the Department of Justice men had been watching the ferryboats.

Some Prisoners Plead Innocence.

Miller, driver of the looted truck, was arrested later in the day and locked up in a west side police station. Bruce, the officials say, has confessed, but the others declare that they are innocent. Griffin, the driver, to whose truck the cheviot was transferred, stoutly maintains that he did not know that the cloth was stolen. He says he was simply asked to cart it and did so.

The loss by importers through these thefts has always been considered something to be charged up to profit and loss, without expecting anything better. Such thefts are continually being investigated and arrests are being made by the police, but never before have the thefts attained the serious proportions they have now.

The Customs officials admitted last night that there must be one or more "fences" for the disposal of such goods. Into this feature of the case, however, they declined to go at length.

"Nothing to say," was the only response that seekers for information received from the customs officials. It was only through the arrests that the news of the trap successfully laid for the thieves came out.

WOMAN'S COAT CLUE TO THEFT.

Detective Meets Her in a Subway Train and Soon Traces Stolen Goods.

Lace and embroidery to the value of $1,200, which disappeared from the consignment of a merchant after his goods had reached the Appraiser's Stores, were discovered yesterday in a little retail shop in Brooklyn. The goods were seized and taken to Police Headquarters, Brooklyn.

The detectives on the case had no clue on which to go except that the laces and embroidery were of a special design made only for one firm here. A chance encounter with a woman in a Subway train wearing a coat made of this particular lace led to the recovery of the goods.

Stein, Doblin & Co., merchants, at 583 Broadway, brought to this country on a Holland-America steamship in May a consignment of many thousands of dollars worth of fine lace and embroidery. The goods went to the Appraiser's Stores, and from there, after the consignment had been appraised and the duty paid, it was sent to the rooms of the firm in Broadway.

When the goods were invoiced it was discovered that the cases had been tampered with and about $1,200 worth stolen. The firm notified the insurance company which was responsible for the safe arrival of the goods. This concern employed the Peterson Detective Bureau to make a search for the stolen goods.

For days the search was kept up, but without results, until one of the detectives took a ride uptown in a Subway train. At one of the stations he noticed that a woman entered the car in which he sat wearing a lace coat of the Stein, Doblin & Co. design. The sleuth approached the woman, and before 125th Street was reached he knew that the lace had been bought of a retail dealer with a place in Fulton Street, Brooklyn. He reported his discovery to his employer and it was found that the retailer was not a customer of the firm.

A member of the Broadway firm accompanied the detective to the Fulton Street store and discovered that the entire window exhibit was made up of the embroideries belonging to his firm. The Brooklyn police were then notified and the goods seized.

This shopkeeper told where he had purchased them. The detectives went to two other stores on Manhattan Avenue on his information, and recovered the rest of the laces and embroidery.

In every case the goods had been purchased from the same man. The detectives found that he had disappeared.

The recovered goods are now at Police Headquarters in Brooklyn.

LOEB CUTS OFF PETTY GRAFT.

Customs Men Forbidden to Accept Free Theatre Tickets or Any Presents.

An order has gone forth to the employes of the Custom House which is causing more wrathful indignation than some of the "shake-ups." This new regulation forbids any man in the employ of the Government receiving or accepting any free theatre tickets or passes whatsoever. It was explained by the officials that such a regulation had always been understood, but that it seemed necessary to "remind" the employes of it.

The order affects not only Inspectors on the piers, who come in contact with theatrical baggage and costumes and the owners of such dutiable property, but every employe whatsoever, even though his work has no connection with baggage inspection. Hence the wrath among the clerks in general, some of whom suggested that this order came into force because of the action of a few men in a certain division where costumes coming in from abroad are brought in under special provisions.

Others surmised that as this was the season when theatrical managers and stars coming home from abroad have to pass Inspectors on the dock, the explanation of the order might be sought in a seasonal forgetfulness.

However this may be, henceforth no Custom House employe may accept free seats from any person connected with the theatrical profession.

ACCIDENT CLAIM DISPUTED.

Mrs. Tjader Returns $6,500 of $24,500 Paid Her Husband for Paralysis.

President Edwin De Leon of the Casualty Company of America held a conference yesterday with the officers of the insurance companies which paid part of the $24,500 accident claim of Richard Tjader, which has since been questioned. Mrs. Tjader returned recently $6,500, and this was divided pro rata among the companies. They are dissatisfied with the settlement proposed by the Casualty Company.

Mrs. Tjader, who is the daughter of Samuel Thorne, Sr., returned the $6,500 after the President of the company had threatened a civil suit on the result of an investigation into the circumstances of her husband's injuries.

Mr. Tjader, who is now in Africa hunting big game, was insured in the Casualty Company of America in September, 1907, for $100,000. While standing on the platform of a street car a few months later a passenger fell against him, wedging him against the controller box and injuring his spine.

Tjader's doctor and a doctor connected with the Casualty Company certified that he was suffering from partial paralysis as a result of a hemorrhage in the spinal canal. For thirteen weeks the Casualty Company gave Tjader $500 a week, and then obtained a general release on the payment of $18,000 additional.

Eight months later the officers of the company heard that Tjader had not been as seriously hurt as he had contended, and after a long investigation they retained John F. McIntyre to dispute the claim. Papers were prepared in a civil action, but a compromise was effected. Six thousand five hundred dollars was paid back to the company, and was divided on a pro rata basis among the companies which had divided the risk with the Casualty Company.

VESSELS FOR NAVAL TARGETS.

Two 125 Feet Long with Water Tight Compartments Being Built.

BOSTON, July 21.—Work is being rushed at the Charlestown Navy Yard under special orders from the Navy Department upon two steel vessels of a new type which are to be used as targets for the American battleship fleets.

Dissatisfaction with the present style of triangular target has led to a more endurable type, to consist of a steel vessel 125 feet long, of 13 feet beam, and 15 feet draught, with 17 water-tight compartments, which will all have to be riddled with shot before the vessel sinks.

These vessels must be ready at the Charlestown Yard within twenty-one days. One is to be sent to the Philippines for the use of the Asiatic Squadron at Cavite and the other to be used by the North Atlantic Squadron.

Mine Superintendent Killed.

WHEELING, West Va., July 21.—In an explosion of fire damp in the Highland Coal Mine at Warnock, Belmont County, Ohio, to-day, Thomas Southern of New Philadelphia, Ohio, Superintendent of the mine, was instantly killed. Accompanied by a party of miners Southern entered the mine with a lighted lamp, and the explosion occurred 200 feet from the mouth of the shaft.

A number of the miners were injured, but not seriously.

LOEB SWEARS IN NEW MARINE POLICE

They Are 300 Strong and Are Organized in Three Platoons—Station at Custom House.

EMPLOYE CURSES HIS CHIEF

Tells Mr. Loeb to Go to, and Is Discharged—McNally Case Will Be Appealed.

Collector Loeb was almost as busy yesterday as in his Roosevelt days handing out and withholding statements. He swore in his new marine police force of 300 men in the morning. With their coming in the old force of Night Inspectors and watchmen went out. Many of the old employes, however, were sworn in as part of the new department.

The marine police will have a station in the Custom House, which will be open day and night. It will be conducted after the manner of a regular police station. The men will be organized into three platoons and will work in eight-hour shifts.

The Chief of the Marine Police is Wilhelm Lutz, a Deputy Surveyor. He was a Sergeant in the army during the Spanish war and later served as Chief of Police in Porto Rico. His salary has been raised from $2,200 to $2,500. His three Lieutenants, each of whom will get a salary of $1,500, are Robert L. L. Warner, William S. Goodwin, and Henry L. Burning.

The appointment of the following roundsmen, each of whom will receive from $1,200 to $1,400 a year, was announced. They are Jonathan H. Case, Clark K. Rogers, Angus C. Bissell, Philip McDonnell, Adolph Cohn, Robert B. Ford, Henry G. Spencer, Edward T. Helgans, Jacob Sanger, Daniel O'Donnell, George Lustig, and John Freed.

The Marine Police are charged with the detection and prevention of violations of the revenue laws and with keeping watch over vessels, piers, stores, warehouses, and merchandise committed to their custody. Under the provisions of Section 3,059 of the Revised Statutes they have been vested by the Collector with certain police powers, and are authorized to make seizures and arrests.

William Richard Parr, at present Special Agent of the Treasury Department, who was mainly instrumental in unearthing the recently exposed frauds in the underweighing of sugar, has been rewarded for his work by appointment as Acting Deputy Surveyor in charge of the Weighing Department. His salary is advanced from $3,000 a year to $3,500. Mr. Parr was the Government's chief witness in the successful prosecutions of those implicated in the sugar frauds.

Another promotion announced was that of Deputy Surveyor James F. Vail, who has been made Acting Deputy Collector in charge of the bureau having supervision of the United States Bonded Warehouses. His salary is raised from $2,500 to $3,000.

A subordinate went into the office of the Collector yesterday. He and Mr. Loeb were heard talking loudly, and the caller said finally:

"Well, you can go to hell!"

The subordinate was discharged and ejected. Mr. Loeb refused to make any statement about the incident. It was stated by some who saw the man that he was intoxicated.

The authorities of the Custom House and the United States Attorney recommended yesterday that an appeal be taken to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in the McNally case, which has attracted a good deal of attention. A statement about the case was handed out at the Custom House.

It tells of the campaign of the Custom House in 1908 against the dressmakers, who, it is said, had abolished the false label system of defrauding the Government for an undervaluing system. The Custom House authorities, when they learned of the new method, had a lot of goods reappraised and collected heavy penal duties and duties in lieu of forfeiture.

Mrs. McNally, the claimant in the case decided by Judge Hand, according to the statement, arrived as the proceedings before the appraisement officers were going on. When she made her entry at the Custom House she added to the invoice made out by her in Paris an amount sufficient to make up the market value of the goods in order that her shipment might not be subject to seizure.

As she had personally made out the invoice before the United States Consul abroad, and had failed to make a proper declaration of their value in her baggage entry, it was decided, after a conference between the Collector and the District Attorney, to make a seizure.

It was contended that as she had not only failed to declare her goods as required by law, but had also committed an offense in making the false invoice in Paris, such act was "an attempt to make entry by means of a false or fraudulent invoice" within the meaning of Section 9 of the Administrative act, and that her subsequent effort to correct this invoice and make entry at the true value could not operate as a waiver of the Government's right to forfeit.

PATTEN DRIVES WHEAT DOWN.

Sells Millions of Bushels of September Option—Has Profits in July.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 21.—James A. Patten and his followers added materially to their bank accounts to-day when they took profits on about 4,000,000 bushels of September and December wheat, and incidentally were instrumental in smashing values in the pit. In addition to the selling by the Patten crowd, other local longs were heavy sellers, and the Armour interests also got credit for unloading part of their line of September. Altogether, it was estimated that about 7,000,000 bushels of long wheat were dumped on the market.

Not only has Patten unloaded several million bushels of the deferred deliveries during the last few days, but he has practically sold out his big line of July. On the bulge to $1.29, a few days ago, he was credited with taking profits on about 5,000,000 bushels and has sold steadily the last week. The amount he has left, it is understood, will not worry him any. Patten's profits on his trades since the May deal are estimated at from $500,000 to $750,000.

The withdrawal to a large extent at least of the Patten clique from the bull side of the wheat market leaves the leadership of the longs with the Armour grain company. This interest is understood to be long with an immense line of September, variously estimated at from 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 bushels.

CITY BREVITIES.

The Mutual Aid Association of the employes of Hackett, Carhart & Co. will hold its twenty-fourth railroad outing on Saturday at Rockland Lake Park.

Prof. Dewey of Columbia University will lecture on suffrage under the auspices of the Equal Franchise Society in Hamilton Hall next Monday afternoon.

The Canadian Pacific Railway has issued a book of eighty pages describing and illustrating the wonderful scenery of the Canadian Rockies. It is entitled "The Challenge of the Mountains," and will be mailed on receipt of postage by Allan Cameron, 458 Broadway.

GIRL HOLDS UP A ROBBER.

Schoolmiss Awes Him with a Shoe Horn Till the Police Arrive.

Miss Grace Dusenberry of 141 Lefferts Place, Brooklyn, a High School girl, standing at an open window of her home with a silver shoe horn in her hand, succeeded in holding at bay until the arrival of the police a negro burglar who attempted to enter the rear of her brother-in-law's house, adjoining, early yesterday. Miss Dusenberry was going up to her room when she thought she heard some one at a door in the house adjoining. As the family is away in the country she became alarmed and called to her brother, who was in the house with her.

Lighting the gas in her room, she looked out of a window, and she felt sure that she saw a form steal under cover in the shrubbery. She quickly threw open the window, and, grabbing a silver shoe horn pointed it straight in the direction of the bushes, and shouted:

"Move and I'll sh—oo—t."

She then yelled to her brother downstairs to run for the police. While the girl stood guard at the window with the shoe horn the Grand Avenue Station was notified by telephone. Policeman Karney and Kelleher, pressing into service a private automobile which they met on the way, were whirled to Lefferts place in a few minutes. After a thorough search of the yards of both houses they were on the point of leaving, when:

"Achoo!" came a violent sneeze from behind a mild-looking rose bush. The two policemen, knowing that roses never sneeze, surrounded the bush and pulled out a negro, who tried to use a knife on them. He was subdued and taken to the station house. There he said he was John Smith of 34 Grand Street, Manhattan. The police say he has a record and is in the Rogues' Gallery.

In the Flatbush Court he waived examination and was held for the Grand Jury in $1,000 bail.

Miss Dusenberry was complimented by the police for her pluck and presence of mind in frightening the negro with her novel weapon. She modestly admitted that she "felt a bit shaky."

WILSON OUT OF DANGER.

Assistant Secretary of State Will Soon Be Back at Work.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Huntington Wilson, Assistant Secretary of State, who has been ill for several days with a slight attack of appendicitis(was reported out of danger to-day.

His physician says Mr. Wilson will be able to resume his duties in a short time.

New Subway to Have a 42d St. Station

By a stenographic error, the list of stations in the new Lexington Avenue Subway, given out by the Public Service Commission on Tuesday, failed to contain the express station at Forty-second Street and Lexington Avenue, and made it appear that the trains would run express from Canal Street to Eighty-sixth Street. That is not the intention of the commission. There is to be a station at Forty-second Street and Lexington Avenue, corresponding with the present Grand Central Station in the Interborough Subway.

EARNED MONEY, SAYS HENEY.

Fees for Services Rendered Prior to Graft Cases.

CORDOVA, Alaska, July 21.—Francis J. Heney of San Francisco, who is at Abercrombie Cañon, fifty-five miles up the Copper River, was told by telephone today of the statement made in Congress by Representative Tawney regarding payments to him from the Federal Government. Mr. Heney said:

"I have not received a dollar in fees except for services rendered prior to the San Francisco graft cases. The delay in payments to me by the United States Government was due to lack of funds, compelling a special appropriation by Congress. A fully itimized statement of all my accounts is in the hands of the United States Attorney General."

GALVESTON SEA WALL STOPS SECOND FLOOD

16 LIVES LOST NEAR BY

After Storm Blows Over Small Boys Paddle About Streets in Canoes—Mayor Sends Message.

Galveston, Texas, July 21.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The City of Galveston sends greetings to her sister cities, the people of the United States, and of the world in that at this hour it has just passed through a most formidable storm, manifesting in its course some of the most violent incidents and cyclonic disturbances. Its great sea wall has completely vindicated its efficiency and protected the city against dangers from the sea, leaving aside such insignificant damages as are incident to all storms. The city, its great business interests, and its people have safely passed through a most severe hurricane. The sea wall proved a complete success, the city's great wharves and shipping interests suffered no damage, and not a life was lost.

(Signed.) LEWIS FISHER, Mayor.

Maco Stewart, President Security Building Company; M. E. Kieberg, City Attorney; V. E. Austin, Commissioner of Streets; E. O. Flood, President Chamber of Commerce; B. Adone, President Maritime Association.

GALVESTON, Texas, July 21.—Fortified behind her seventeen-foot sea wall, and elevated to a point above the danger line, Galveston to-day passed safely through a hurricane that resembled the disastrous storm of 1900. Part of the island on which the city is situated was again inundated, the overflowing sea water reaching a height of seven feet or more. That portion of the island which has been protected suffered comparatively little harm. No lives were lost in the city, and the property damage is not large.

However, at a seashore resort, Tarpon Fishing Pier, across the bay, it is supposed that sixteen people perished.

Sweeping westward, the tropical storm, which had been central over the Gulf of Mexico for twenty-four hours, struck Galveston shortly after 11 o'clock. The wind attained a velocity of sixty-eight miles an hour and shifted to the northeast, heaving the waters of Galveston Bay up against the island and flooding that quarter which had not been raised. The water backed up into the main streets of the city, but the principal damage was confined to the beach front, where bathhouses and pleasure piers were swept away. Shipping was undisturbed.

A hurricane for East Texas was forecast at the District Weather Bureau in New Orleans early this morning and warnings were sent out. When wind and rain arrived several hours later they found Galveston prepared. The inhabitants of the few scattered houses in the low part of the island had already sought safety and the vessels that had cleared and had prepared to sail were riding at anchor in the bay.

The fury of the storm soon abated, and the anxiety of those who entertained fears of another tidal wave was soon relieved. Small boys paddling around in the flooded streets, even before the heavy winds had died down, presented a scene which dispelled the alarm felt by the timid. So short was the duration of the storm that the Mallory Line steamer which was booked to sail for New York shortly after noon left on schedule time.

A heavy dredge, torn from its moorings, was blown against the single bridge that connects Galveston Island with the mainland, breaking the telegraph cables that were carried by the bridge. As a result, all manner of rumors were soon rife throughout the country to the effect that Galveston had again suffered such a storm as that which partly destroyed the city nine years ago. It was not until communication was re-established that these reports could be denied. A crew was put to work repairing the bridge and laying new cables.

A report gives the loss of life in the storm as sixteen, who perished on the Tarpon Fishing Pier on the north jetty, six miles from the city across the bay. This was a new resort, two stories high, and with twenty-five rooms furnished. It was erected early this season at a cost of $10,000.

Those drowned were members of a fishing party and employes of the Tarpon Pier Jetty. Boats were sent to their assistance late to-day and it was learned that the house in which they sought refuge had been washed away. Those known to have been in the party are Capt. Bettison and wife, Edward Lewis, C. H. Daily, circulating manager of The Galveston Tribune, formerly of Chicago, and four negroes.

Mrs. Daily was a guest of the pier and it it also stated that a young man named Peatshorn of Houston, son of a book dealer, was also among the guests. This report could not be confirmed, however.

It is impossible to-night to make an accurate estimate of the monetary damage. Few buildings were blown down, but it is believed that many warehouses were flooded and that goods on the bottom floors of these buildings were ruined.

The storm covered a wide area along the Gulf coast. Some damage is reported as far south as Matagorda Bay, and as far east as the Parish of Cameron, La.

As a result of the damage to the bridge that connects Galveston with the mainland, and over which all the trains entering or leaving the city are forced to cross, communication by rail has been cut off. Crews will work on the bridge all night, but it is not probable that trains will be allowed to go over the structure until late to-morrow. Tugboats are carrying passengers, mail, and freight across the bay to Galveston to-night.

CENSURES A LENIENT JURY.

Verdict of Not Guilty in a Mail Theft Case Angers Judge Hand.

Judge Hand, in the Criminal Branch of the United States Circuit Court, yesterday, vigorously censured a jury which had returned a verdict of not guilty in the case of David Pearlman, a clerk in Post Office Station E, arrested on a charge of having abstracted a letter from the mail on March 23. Judge Hand said he failed to see how on the evidence of the Government's witnesses, all of whom had been in the service for twenty years or more, such a verdict could be returned, and that the fact that it was returned tended to shake his faith in the efficacy of the jury system.

KUHNE QUITS JAIL TO-DAY.

Captain Who Disobeyed a Court Order Slated for Transfer and Suspension.

Acting Captain August Kuhne of Brooklyn, who was sent to Raymond Street Jail for thirty days by Supreme Court Justice Burr for contempt in disobeying a court order by "mugging" Frank Jenkins, a banker, will be released to-day. Yesterday he paid the fine of $250, which was also imposed.

It was stated on good authority yesterday at Police Headquarters that Kuhne, immediately upon reporting to the Brooklyn Police Headquarters, would receive an order transferring him from Brooklyn, where he was the acting head of the Detective Bureau, to the Manhattan Detective Bureau, and suspending him from duty. He was a favorite of ex-Commissioner Bingham.

It was said that he would be charged with conduct unbecoming an officer.

TAFT'S DINNER FAILS TO BREAK DEADLOCK

the negotiations, and their report to-day was most satisfactory.

Borah Becomes Reconciled.

Senator Borah had been one of the most ardent advocates of protected hides, but after breakfasting with the President this morning he became reconciled to the President's compromise. Senator Dixon and other Senators from the Middle West showed the same change of heart.

Reductions in leathers below the House rate, of course, would be beyond the power of the Conference Committee, which, theoretically at least, cannot go outside the limits set by the two houses. To remedy this parliamentary hitch it was proposed that a concurrent resolution be put through, and it is considered likely that such a resolution will be considered when the House meets on Friday. The rate proposed for shoes is 10 per cent.—5 per cent. below the House rates—and many leather items will come down in proportion.

It is known that many shoe and leather men, who have been in Washington steadily for weeks, decided two or three days ago that if they really wanted free hides the psychological moment had come to tell the President they were ready to accept heavy reductions in their finished product. They acted promptly on that decision, and yesterday and the day before they saw the President. The precise line of the President's policy is thought to have been influenced by what these men told him, and his power over Senators was much increased by his ability to tell the New Englanders that he was acting in line with the express desire of the industry in question.

Within the conference all seemed perfect harmony to-day. Yesterday's explosion seems to have cleared the air and good progress on a number of smaller items was made before the conference adjourned to prepare for the dinner at the White House. While it was admitted that the big moot points had not yet been settled, the conferees expressed more hopefulness of a spedy report than has been heard in several days. Yesterday it was said that twenty-two paragraphs, aside from those relating to raw materials, remained, and to-day many of these were adjusted definitely.

Taft Pacifies Payne.

President Taft is credited with causing the "dove of peace" to hover over the conference chamber to-day. It was learned that after Senator Aldrich and Speaker Cannon poured their troubles into the ears of the Executive yesterday he undertook to bring the warring factions together. Consequently the President ordered out his big touring car and immediately after dinner last night he drew up in front of Mr. Payne's home. Soon the Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee was seated beside the President in the commodious tonneau, and the car was dispatched toward country roads.

The President and Mr. Payne breathed the fresh air and talked over the situation. What they said may never be known, but Mr. Payne made no objections to-day to taking up subjects not involved in the White House programme concerning raw materials.

Representative Tawney, Chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations, called on Chairman Payne to-day to assure him of the support of the House in his fight for the rates of the House bill. Mr. Tawney also discussed the lumber controversy with Mr. Payne. He assured him that he would insist on the House rates on lumber, and that he thought the President favored the lower duties of the House bill. Before returning to the conference room for the afternoon session Mr. Payne declared that he desired to have harmony, and that he would like to sign the conference report if it was possible for him to do so without yielding in his fight for lower duties.

On all sides it was stated that whatever breach had occurred in the committee yesterday had been smoothed over. Even Mr. Payne was inclined to treat the matter as a joke, and when he came slowly from the conference room this evening he laughingly called the attention of the newspaper correspondents to the fact that this time he was the last to leave.

Protracted bickerings over the fruit schedule ended to-day with the definite adoption of the Senate rate of 1½ cents a pound on lemons. This is an increase of 50 per cent. over the existing law, while it adds one-quarter of a cent to the rates adopted in the House.

Other Reductions Made.

Many paragraphs in the metal schedule were finally disposed of after hanging fire for days. In most of them the Senate rates underwent slight reductions, and the rates as finally agreed on are in the nature of compromises. Zinc spleter was reduced from the Senate rate of 1⅛ cents a pound to 1⅜ cents—⅛ cent below the existing law.

Lead underwent similar reductions. From the Senate rate of 2⅛ cents a pound, the same as the Dingley law, it was reduced to a flat 2 cents. Corresponding reductions of ⅛ of a cent were made on the lead paints, which had already been reduced ⅛ from the Dingley rates.

Similar agreements put tungsten ore at a duty of 10 cents, 5 cents below the Senate rates, and salicylic acid went to the House rate of 5 cents. An effort is being made by the manufacturers of cheap laces to have them raised 10 per cent., but in the face of the steady opposition of the House they now feel that they will be kept almost satisfied if the new Senate paragraph giving them some increases be retained. Already several items have been eliminated in conference.

An important modification contained in the redraft of the corporation tax amendment provides for the exemption from taxation of the interest paid by banks on deposits. It was pointed out that under the original draft this exemption ran only to the level of deposits equaling the par value of the capital stock, and the argument was successfully presented that such a limitation worked unnecessary hardship.

With the Senate tangle on hides apparently smoothed out, activity began to appear this morning among the House advocates of protected raw materials. These "insurgents," who are ordinarily of the strongest regular stamp, were presided over by Gaines of West Virginia, and mustered about twenty votes. They said afterward that they have thirty-nine votes in sight, and that they had discussed the advisability of voting against any report carrying free raw materials. They will meet again to-morrow afternoon, but in view of the consistent support most of them have at all times given the House organization, no serious trouble is expected from them.

Progressive Republican Senators decided at a meeting to-day to issue a statement outlining their position on downward revision. Senator Cummins has been invited to take breakfast with President Taft to-morrow to discuss the attitude of the insurgents, and therefore it was decided to withhold the statement until to-morrow.

CLOTHING MEN SEE TAFT.

Woolen Combination Makes Tariff Reduction Necessary, They Tell Him.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—A delegation, representing 95 per cent. of the readymade clothing manufacturers of the country, called upon President Taft to-day and told him that the wool dealers had been forming a combination in the last few years and were now ready to advance the price on the quality of wool used in the cheaper grades of clothes—"the poor man's raiment," as they expressed it.

In order to prevent this increase, it was asserted, reductions from the Dingley rates were necessary. It also would be necessary, according to the clothiers, to change the method of imposing the duty.

The President's visitors included S. J. Kline of Chicago, Sigmund D. Sonneborn of Baltimore, and Frank R. Chambers and William Goldman of New York.

Statements that "advances in the prices of woolen fabrics resulting from the operation of the Dingley bill, will add 20 or 25 per cent. to the retail cost of men's clothing" were denied in a statement issued yesterday by the American Association of Woolen and Worsted Manufacturers, which includes a majority of the woolen and worsted mills in the United States. The statement says:

"Such advances as have been made in the prices of fabrics have added at the most only a few cents to the cost of the material entering into a suit of clothes, and are due not to any combination among the mills, nor to any tariff changes, but solely to the recovery of the wool market from the decline which followed the panic of 1907."

of the code. The Mayor at this point read several letters from the Building Superintendents of various cities in the country, all condemning the use of this method of fireproofing.

"How about that?" asked the Mayor.

Only Hard Coal Cinders Here.

"Soft coal is used in every one of those cities," quickly replied Ryan, "while here we can only get hard coal cinders."

This won loud applause from the crowd.

L. Laflin Kellogg, counsel for the General Contractors' Association, also attacked the code.

"The adoption of the new code," said he, "will mean the creation of a Superintendent of Buildings who will be an autocrat, to whose personal and arbitrary discretion all builders and owners must bend and yield; an increase in the cost of construction of buildings, and the removing of many safeguards now provided by the Fire Department. It is absolutely the most careless, dangerous, illegal, and despotic piece of legislation that has been forced on a free government in years."

The last speaker was Thomas Rock of the Central Federated Union.

More than 100 applications were received at the office of the Superintendent of Buildings of Queens County yesterday, including one from the Horn-Benson Company of Brooklyn, for the erection of twenty brick single family houses at Brenton Place and Brenton Street, Jamaica. This activity was taken to exemplify the fear of the code on the part of New York builders.

LABOR LEADERS AGAINST CODE.

Vote It Down by 17 to 6—Tammany's Plan Fails.

The Committee of One Hundred gave out a statement yesterday in which the assertion was made that Tammany Hall had sought to carry the war over the Building Code into the camp of organized labor with a view of disarming opposition there, and that the friends of Tammany Leader Murphy had been defeated in this effort.

An indication of the way in which it has been attempted to exert partisan political influence in the labor organizations is furnished by the events of yesterday's meeting of the Consolidated Board of Business Agents of the Building Trades. The statement says in part:

"A resolution protesting against the proposed new code was introduced and adopted by a vote of 17 to 6. This protest was opposed by Alderman James Nugent, who represents the steamfitters' organization as a walking delegate. Nugent is one of the Tammany members of the Board of Aldermen who voted in that body for the Kenneally report on code revision (the majority report.)

"Kenneally, who is Chairman of the Building Committee of the Board of Aldermen and handled the fight in that board for the proposed new code, is himself the business agent of the Steamfitters Helpers' Union. The only trades whose delegates followed Nugent in the opposition to the resolution of protest in the Consolidated Board of Business Agents are the steamfitters, the elevator constructors, and the plasterers.

"It is fortunate that the repeated efforts of Tammany to make political use of labor organizations is being quite generally resented by organized labor."

It was learned yesterday that when Albert Abrams, a Socialist, was elected President of the Central Federated Union last Sunday, it was against the opposition of a man who is regarded among labor men as Tammany's representative in that organization. He was heavily backed by the politicians. The opposition candidate was Eugene Johnson, a member of the Musical Union. The man who placed him in nomination was Andrew P. Eagan, delegate from the Elevator Constructors' Union.

Members of the Committee of One Hundred are jubilant over the result and are congratulating themselves over giving organized labor such a large representation on the committee.

WRIGHT HAS MISHAP BUT LANDS SAFELY

He Had Been Up Less Than Two Minutes When Magneto Wheel Fell.

LATER FLIES 11 MINUTES

Wilbur with a Stop Watch Estimates the Speed at 44 Miles an Hour—Passenger to Go Up Soon.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Because of a break in his machinery Orville Wright was forced to-day to stop his engine when he was speeding along at a forty-five-mile gait and bring his aeroplane to the earth at Fort Myer. He made the descent in perfect order, and the machine settled gently without the slightest damage. A second flight resulted in his circling the parade ground twelve and one-quarter times in less than eleven minutes. When the aviator discovered that the motor was working perfectly he descended, and the day's tests were at an end.

The accident to the engine, which occurred when Orville had been up less than two minutes, disclosed the perfect control he has over the machine. The aeroplane was speeding down the field on its third lap when a small object was seen to fall from it. Almost instantly the power was shut off, the propellers ceased to revolve, and the aeroplane began to pitch slightly.

It slid down from an altitude of about 80 feet, was checked at 50 feet, slid again, and when within a few feet of the ground rose lightly and settled. There was a puff of dust as the machine slid along the ground, and then Orville stepped from the seat and proceeded to the ballon house, near which he had brought down his craft.

One of the Signal Corps officers, who had seen the object fall, walked across the field and picked it up. It proved to be a gear wheel on the magneto. It was taken to the machine, and Charles Taylor, Wright's mechanician, made an examination. Then he sent to the shed and had a plumber's blow lamp brought out. In a few minutes the wheel was brazed into place.

While the repairs were being made in the open field, and during the ensuing wait to allow the metal to cool, the wind had freshened. The brothers waited for a quarter of an hour to give the breeze an opportunity to die down, which it showed no signs of doing. A few minutes after 6:30 the Wrights despaired of better conditions, and preparations for another flight were made.

When the aeroplane was shot away it sailed directly into the teeth of an eight-mile wind. The breeze was puffy, and for the first two or three rounds of the field its effect on the progress of the aeroplane was noticeable. Then Orville rose to a height of 150 feet, where he seemed to find easier going. Ten times he swept around the parade grounds and then determined on alighting. For two more circuits he nosed above the ground at a height of not more than fifteen feet, and, when he had picked out his alighting place, he shut off his power, and the aeroplane settled almost without a jar. It was in the air just short of eleven minutes.

Wright Increases Speed.

Aside from the ease with which Orville brought the aeroplane to earth after his engine failed him, the feature of the day's tests was the increased speed attained. The engine had been keyed up so that the revolutions of the shafts were increased from 1,200 to 1,400 per minute. The brothers were not sure of the success of their changes in the gears, so nothing was said of the experiment before the flight.

The flier, however, had not been up the second time more than two minutes when it was apparent to the spectators that the machine was making much faster speed than at any time since it has flown at the army post. It raced down the field, fading rapidly into the early twilight, turned as rapidly with a flash of its planes, and came soaring down on the crowds with the speed of an express train.

In the middle of the flight Wilbur Wright deserted his post at the foot of the starting derrick and made his way across the field. He had a stop-watch in his hand. For two circuits of the parade he watched the flier closely, making notations of the time on the back on an envelope. He appeared satisfied with the performance of the aeroplane.

"Orville was making a little better than forty-four miles an hour," he said after the flight. "That means the engine now will drive the aeroplane at a rate slightly exceeding forty miles when we take up a passenger."

It is generally believed that Lieut. Foulois of the Signal Corps will take his place beside Orville either to-morrow or Friday for a trial spin. When the second flight was finished it was rapidly growing dusk and a storm was threatening, so the machine was wheeled into its shed.

Dickinson Congratulates Wright.

The descent from midair following the accident called for praise from Secretary of War Dickinson, Gen. James Allen, Chief of the Signal Corps, and other officers. The Secretary and Mrs. Dickinson, accompanied by M. Jusserand, the French Ambassador, and his wife, congratulated Orville on his feat.

Secretary of State Knox was also present at the flight. Representative and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, with a hamper of sandwiches in their automobile, proved a greater attraction for him than the aeroplane, however, and the Secretary of State remained at the edge of the field munching sandwiches and enjoying iced tea during the afternoon.

Senators Elkins, Newlands, Dolliver, and Dick were among those of the upper house of Congress present in the Congressional tent. An unusually large number of Representatives likewise watched the trials, while the Diplomatic Corps again was much in evidence.

Miss Katherine Wright, sister of the aviators, reached Washington to-day and was present at the army post, but she avoided the crowd and remained at the balloon shed while her brother Orville was trying out his machine.

BLERIOT MAY TRY TO-DAY.

Arrives at Calais with His Monoplane for Flight Across Channel.

CALAIS, July 21.—M. Bleriot, the French aeronaut, arrived here to-day with his monoplane. He announces that he may make an attempt to cross the English Channel to-morrow. Count de Lambert also began a series of trials with his aeroplane to-day at Wissant.

The feverish haste of his rivals has induced Hubert Latham, the aviator who made a daring but unsuccessful attempt to cross the channel on Monday, to prepare hastily his new machine, which is already on the way here from Chalons.

M. Bleriot's monoplane is of the Latham type, but is the smallest flying machine yet built. It is fitted with a three-cylinder mtor, which is air cooled, and drives a two-bladed propeller. The pilot's seat is in a skiff-like body behind the wings.

FOR A BIG AIRSHIP GARAGE.

German Company to Erect Sheds, Repair Shops, and Reservoirs.

BERLIN, July 21.—A company was formed here to-day for the purpose of erecting a great airship garage, with attached landing and testing grounds. The Directorate is made up of many persons well known in Germany, including Major Von Tschudi, manager of the Frankfort Air Navigation Exposition; Capt. Von Kehler, manager of the Motor Airship Study Company, and Capt. Von Pustau of the German Airship Society.

As the company is interested in dirigible balloons, it designs to lease about 1,600 acres near Berlin, where it will erect great sheds and repair shops and benzine and hydrogen reservoirs.

COUNT COSTARELLI'S LINEAGE

Italians Say Man Who Attracted Mrs. Lancaster Is Brother of Peddlers.

BOSTON, Mass., July 21.—"Count" Guido Costarelli de Gregorio, who left on the Baltic with Mrs. Joseph F. Lancaster of the Hemenway Chambers, is believed to be the brother of two Sicilian banana peddlers, who, by hard work in the streets of New York, have amassed a fortune. Residents in the Italian colony in the north end say that this is so.

It is further said that Costarelli was married at Messina before he first came to America. If that be true, he committed a perjury when he secured his license to marry Miss Maude Murray at Cambridge, in 1899, for he then declared that the contemplated marriage would be his first.

The steamer Baltic, on which Costarelli and Mrs. Lancaster are crossing the ocean, is due at Queenstown, Ireland, on Saturday. It is not known whether friends of Mrs. Lancaster's husband will meet her there or will wait for the arrival of the ship in England before going to meet her.

WATCH FOR STRIKEBREAKERS.

Men Guard River at McKees Rocks—Butler Men Vote to Stay Out.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, July 21.—Marshall D. Brown of the Allegheny County courts spent two hours in Chambers to-day discussing strike conditions with representatives of both the Pressed Steel Car Company and their employes. Aside from obtaining a promise from the representatives of President Frank Hoffstot that certain alleged grievances would be looked into, nothing was accomplished.

There was a mass meeting of strikers with their families and friends on the Indian Mound, back of McKees Rocks, to-day. The strikers were addressed at eight different points and in eight different languages. Each section appeared to vote solidly against anything that looked like compromise.

However, the air is filled with rumors that special train loads of strike breakers have been started from Chicago, that they should reach here in the early morning. This has made the strikers angry and suspicious. At least 1,000 workmen are patrolling the streets and railways and also the river banks to-night, guarding against possible surprise.

Notices were served on all strikers who occupied company houses to vacate peacefully on Aug. 1 to make way for other tenants.

Clerks of the mills went to each of the householders to-day and asked them a series of questions, ending with: "Would you be willing to return to work if you got more money?"

Most of the workmen replied in the affirmative and there was great rejoicing, because it was thought the company was about to capitulate. Hours later these same workmen were notified to leave their houses.

Some of the strikers set fire to these houses.

BUTLER, Penn., July 21.—Despite the assurance of the officials of the Standard Steel Car Company through Father Bacewski that as soon as conditions warranted an increase in wages would be granted its employes, the striking workingmen at the plants of the car company, the Butler Wheel Company, and the Standard Forged Steel Wheel Company late to-day voted to remain idle until their employers sign a written agreement granting them an immediate increase in wages and refunds on back rentals of company houses.

The car and wheel companies declare they will attempt to operate their plants to-morrow.

Hughes Leaves Adirondacks.

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., July 21.—Gov. Hughes left his Summer home here shortly before midnight to-night for Albany. He will devote the next two days to completing certain official business and to preparing for his Western trip. Gov. Hughes will leave Albany for the West on Friday. He will be accompanied only by Col. Treadwell, his military secretary.

SAW ADAMS HITTING SUTTON BEFORE SHOT

Lieut. Willing Is Certain, However, That Sutton Fired the Fatal Shot.

ROELKER REALLY WOUNDED

Witness Saw Blister Where Bullet Had Glanced Off—Bevan Says Sutton Talked of Suicide Once.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., July 21.—Testimony that Lieut. Robert E. Adams was hitting Lieut. James W. Sutton shortly before the shot was fired which killed Sutton was given by Lieut. E. S. Willing to-day before the naval board of inquiry into Sutton's death. Willing, who was officer of the day, and was summoned on the night of Sutton's death, differed in this point with other witnesses.

Lieut. Bevan, who ran down to the place where they had all heard the first shots almost at the same time that Lieut. Willing did, testified that he saw no blows exchanged.

As Lieut. Willing on cross-examination described Sutton, either standing or on his knee with Adams holding him by the back of the neck with one hand and punching him with the other, Mrs. Parker, who sat directly opposite the witness, smiled incredulously at Willing, and turning to Mr. Van Dyke, one of her counsel, said indignantly:

"Imagine a wild man, as they describe my brother to have been, standing up with a revolver in each hand, and taking a punching like that. It is wholly incredible."

Testimony was also given that Lieut. Roelker had really been wounded. Lieut. Willing had found a blister on his chest, evidently made by a bullet which glanced off the ribs and did not penetrate.

If incredulous smiles could have disconcerted the witnesses, they would have been hopelessly squelched by those frequently directed at them by Mrs. Parker and Mrs. Sutton.

A long and earnest discussion of the case between Major Leonard and Mrs. Sutton and her daughter at Carvel Hall last night bore fruit to-day during Lieut. Willing's testimony, when the Judge Advocate asked the witness if he thought the punching Sutton got would have killed him, or if the witness had any way of knowing whether Sutton was dead before the last shot was fired. It was known that Mrs. Sutton impressed upon Major Leonard her belief that her son was beaten to death and afterward shot.

The witness answered these questions in the negative, and said there was no doubt in his mind that Sutton pulled the trigger of the revolver when he was shot. Willing testified that he took the .38-calibre service revolver from Sutton's right hand after the shooting, but could not remember what became of it after that. It was supposed to have got into the hands of Sergt. De Hart, who threw it away. He will be a witness.

Willing, who stood within two feet of Sutton's head, saw no other revolver at the time, he said. Adams and Bevan thought it might have been the smaller revolver with which Sutton shot himself.

Lieut. Bevan created a stir in court today when he testified that, six weeks prior to the shooting, Sutton had told him that life in the Marine Corps had no attraction for him, and that some day he would shoot himself.

Henry E. Davis, chief counsel for the Suttons, had not much more than started his cross-examination of Lieut. Edward S. Willing, now attached to the marine barracks at the navy yard in Philadelphia, when the hearing was adjourned for the day. In a few minor points, referring principally to the description of the immediate scene of the tragedy, Mr. Davis succeeded in showing discrepancies in Lieut. Willing's testimony at this and the former inquiry. In essential particulars Lieut. Willing's story differed little from that of his brother officers.

A report that Lieut. Sutton carried life insurance of $20,000 which could not be collected if he had killed himself was denied to-day by Mrs. Sutton and her daughter. If he had carried as much as $3,000 insurance the family knew nothing of it, they said.

The day's session began with Lieut. William F. Bevan of the Marine Corps again on the stand. The scene in the courtroom was brightened to-day by the presence of a number of young women in Summer gowns, accompanied by some of the marines. Major Leonard continued his examination of Lieut. Bevan. He asked the witness if he knew of threats against the lives of any officers in camp or attempts on Sutton's part to shoot up the camp.

Henry E. Davis, counsel for Mrs. Sutton, objected to the question as irrelevant.

"If any officers should be subsequently charged with causing Sutton's death," said Major Leonard, "any testimony which would tend to show a motive would be material. If such an officer had caused his death through a deep sense of fear and in an effort to protect his own life, such testimony would be very material."

After a number of the lawyers had argued, the court ruled that it should be allowed.

The witness said he did not recall ever hearing Lieut. Sutton threaten to take the life of any one in camp. He told of Sutton's shooting-up the camp as told previously by Lieuts. Adams and Osterman.

Asked if there was any interval between the time some one said, "My God, he has killed Roelker" and the time Sutton shot himself, as testified to by the witness, Lieut. Bevan said it was only a few seconds.

Positive Sutton Fired.

"Are you positive that Lieut. Sutton caused the revolver to be fired at the time he was shot?" inquired Major Leonard.

"Yes, I know that no one present was in contact with the revolver except Lieut. Sutton," Lieut. Bevan answered.

Arthur E. Birney, Lieut. Adams's counsel, questioned the witness. Bevan told of a conversation with Sutton about six weeks prior to his death, in which Sutton said life in the navy did not attract him, and that some day he would shoot himself.

"What led up to the conversation?" asked Mr. Birney.

"It was merely a conversation in which Sutton spoke of his experiences at the academy and his examinations," said Bevan.

Counsel for Sutton's mother then began a cross-examination of the witness. Mr. Davis took the witness back to the happenings in camp prior to the fight in which Sutton lost his life.

"What did Sutton say when you placed him under arrest in the camp?" asked Mr. Davis.

"I don't recall his exact words," answered Bevan. "It is hard to recollect everything that was said and happened after two years, but I think he said, 'Damn the arrest. I am going to get my mess jacket and things, and clear out of here forever,' or words to that effect."

Lieut. Bevan said he met Lieut. Willing, the officer of the day, on his way to the place from which the shots seemed to be fired.

"Lieut. Willing was coming toward the camp, and I was hurrying away from it," he continued. He did not see Sutton after he left camp until he found him on the ground.

The witness said it was his impression that he heard six shots fired prior to the time Sutton fired the last shot which ended his life.

"Did you see Lieut. Roelker lying on the ground near Sutton?" asked Mr. Davis.

"Yes."

"Was he lying on his back or on his face?"

"I don't remember that."

Two Men on Sutton.

When he found Sutton there were two men on him, the witness said. His body was lying face downward, with his head toward the barracks and the body at a right angle with the path. Roelker lay further away from the path than Sutton.

Mr. Davis requested the witness to name the men and describe their positions about Sutton's body when he came up. Bevan could not recall the scene with the same detail and accuracy he did yesterday, and confused some of the men and their relative positions whom he said were present yesterday.

"I am only describing a faint image," said Bevan, "of the surroundings I believe I had in my mind. I may have confused the men then, for my mind was not on the surroundings at the time, but on the one object of preventing further injury being done."

Mr. Davis dwelt upon the details of the scene as Lieut. Bevan first described them until the Judge Advocate objected, saying: "Mr. Bevan has answered these questions as best he can, presumably, and I don't believe any good result, or any result, will be accomplished by going over and over the same ground. Counsel has been allowed a very great latitude."

The court overruled the objection, and Mr. Davis continued to question the witness about the immediate surroundings of the shooting.

According to the sum of Lieut. Bevan's testimony, the members of the group he saw about Sutton were Lieuts. Utley, Adams, Willing, and Sergt. Dehart.

"Although you heard six shots after Sutton left camp with two revolvers, when you reached him you still feared he might have some shots in the revolvers, so you attempted to hold him to the ground, is that right?" Mr. Davis asked.

"Yes," was the reply.

"Do you recall that Utley or Dehart said anything to you why they were holding Sutton down?"

"No, I don't recall anything said. They had been running some distance and were out of breath. We were all in the same condition."

Told Adams Not to Hit.

"I ordered Lieut. Adams to desist from hitting Sutton, which he did immediately and stood back," added the witness. He could not tell which man it was who said "Sutton had killed Roelker."

The first time the witness saw a revolver after he reached Sutton was when he saw the flash of the shot in front of Sutton's head and Lieut. Willing reached over and took the revolver from Sutton's hand.

"Do you know what became of the revolver after that?" asked Mr. Davis.

"No, Sir, I do not," replied Lieut. Bevan.

"You testified before that you thought Sutton shot himself in the forehead, didn't you?" persisted Mr. Davis, who read the testimony to that effect from the record.

"That was merely the impression I got at the time. I didn't really know," said Lieut. Bevan.

Noting some of the small discrepancies in Lieut. Bevan's testimony at this time and at the former hearing, Mr. Davis asked the witness if his present testimony was less accurate than upon the former occasion.

"I have testified to my best recollection on both occasions," Lieut. Bevan replied.

The witness remembered going for a physician, Dr. McCormick, for Lieut. Roelker after the shooting.

Mr. Davis finished his cross-examination. In answer to some questions by Mr. Birney of counsel for Lieut. Adams, the witness said he saw no blows struck after he reached Sutton. He could not tell accurately how far away from Sutton's head the flash was which he saw when Sutton shot himself.

Major Leonard asked Bevan why he had not personally restrained Sutton from leaving the camp with his two revolvers.

"Why, I had no idea that he was going to inflict an injury upon any one. I only thought he would go down into the woods to gratify a fondness which he had for firearms," the witness answered.

Major Leonard wanted to know how Lieut. Roelker could have reached the scene of the encounter in time to get wounded after his altercation with Sutton in camp.

Lieut. Bevan testified he did not meet Roelker on the way. He said he might have crossed a ravine, but the last time the witness saw him he was going away from the ravine.

Commander Hood, presiding, questioned the witness.

"Why did you let Sutton leave camp with the revolvers?" asked the senior member of the board.

"I thought Sutton was partly crazy, and always had thought so," replied Lieut. Bevan. "I thought he was bluffing with his revolvers, as he had done before, and it might be a better place out of camp for him." Lieut. Bevan was then excused.

Lieut. Osterman, who testified yesterday, was recalled. Major Leonard said he had recalled him to clear up any discrepancies in Osterman's testimony about his conversation with Sutton prior to the shooting which might have slipped his memory yesterday.

Saw Sutton and Miss Stewart.

"I could not remember yesterday meeting Miss Stewart and Sutton at Carvel Hall during the evening," said Lieut. Osterman, "but I now recall I met them in the lobby and talked with them a few minutes."

"Was anything said at that conversation which would be pertinent to this inquiry?" asked Major Leonard.

"No," replied Osterman.

At Mr. Davis's request Osterman was sent to Carvel Hall to locate the room in which he and his brother officers drank beer on the night of Sutton's death.

Lieut. Edward S. Willing, U. S. M. C., who was officer of the day at the marine camp when the shooting occurred, was called as a witness. He rushed to the scene from the camp when he heard the shots. He testified he saw three men sitting on Sutton, and as he came up to Sutton's head he heard Adams, presumably, who was the only man back of him, say, "He's shot Roelker," or "Roelker is killed."

At that there was a report and flash by Sutton's head and the witness turned his head just in time to see the revolver in Sutton's hand.

"Are you sure Sutton shot himself?" asked Major Leonard.

"There is not the slightest doubt in my mind that he did," replied Willing.

Willing afterward leaned over and took the revolver out of Sutton's hand, he said. Willing thought he heard some one say, "He killed himself," but he could not remember who said it.

He told of going over to Roelker and putting his hand inside his coat over his heart and felt something soft. It afterward turned out to be a large blood-blister, at the point where a bullet is supposed to have struck squarely on Roelker's ribs without penetrating the flesh.

"Do you think the punching Sutton was getting was such as would kill an ordinarily vigorous man?" asked Major Leonard.

"No, I should think not," replied the witness.

"Had you any way of knowing if Sutton was dead before the revolver was fired which you think killed him?"

"No, but I don't believe he was," Willing answered.

From this line of questioning it was evident the Judge Advocate had in mind Mrs. Sutton's assertion that she believed her son was beaten to death before he was shot. Lawyer Birney, Adams's counsel, questioned the witness before Mr. Davis began the cross-examination, which was still in progress when at 4 o'clock the hearing was adjourned for the day.

Mr. Davis said that he had heard nothing from Miss Stewart's father, who went to Canada to discuss with her the possibility of her testifying.

THAW'S MOTHER ATTACKS JEROME

Issues a Pamphlet in Which She Accuses Him of Persecuting Her Son.

RAPS JUSTICE DOWLING, TOO

Says His Committal of Thaw to Matteawan Was "Cruel and Violative of Every Safeguard."

Despite the protests of friends, Mrs. William Thaw issued yesterday her pamphlet on the Thaw case, headed "The Secret Unveiled." She went to the trouble of having the document copyrighted, and it is said that 1,500 copies will be printed and mailed to her friends and the press of the country.

In the introduction Mrs. Thaw admits that she expects to be criticised by her friends and others for "descending into the arena," but says: "Exceptional conditions demand exceptional treatment, and the fact that District Attorney Jerome has on four occasions left the quite sufficient responsibilities of his own district to pursue this case into a district within which, as he himself acknowledges with his own signature, he has no jurisdiction, compels this unusual procedure on my part."

It is said that Thaw's attorneys did not favor the publication of the document, as they did not want to arouse Mr. Jerome's hostility at this time, and bring him to White Plains to harass the prisoner when he takes the witness stand in his efforts to prove himself sane. There was also a feeling on their part that Justice Mills might not take kindly to the criticism of Justice Dowling, as he is regarded as very firm on the subject of the judicial amenities. The best they could do was to get her to cut out certain parts.

Mrs. Thaw takes up the case at the time of her arrival from Europe, in July, 1906. She says:

"I found a cowardly combination made up of men of professional standing, together with disappointed blackmailers, perjurers, and others, all working in the interest of the very rich companions of Stanford White. To prevent a trial which they feared would result in exposure, they set to work to blacken the reputation of my son, an average young man, with a chivalrous nature, as shown by his attempt to break up these disreputable places.

"They pretended that my son's knowledge of the three infamous dens used by Stanford White and his companions for disgusting orgies and by White himself, were only the delusions of a disordered mind. Jerome, in his speech to the last jury, was unexpectedly moved to reveal the truth. He admitted all H. K. Thaw and Anthony Comstock had stated was true, and himself added charges in terms more severe than any they had used.

"Eight months ago I determined to remain here (near Matteawan) until my son should be released from the illegal imprisonment, where he has been enduring conditions that would wreck most men with a fortitude that of itself destroys one argument of vindictive partisans."

The key to the whole prosecution, Mrs. Thaw says, is to be found in the closing sentences of one of Mr. Jerome's speeches, where he cited the case of Monk Eastman, and said that certain people would be only too glad to have him adjudged insane, so that certain things could not come out. For the same reason she believes the "miserable degenerates" behind the prosecution of her son are interested in keeping him in the lunatic asylum.

Speaking of the action of Justice Dowling in committing Thaw to the asylum for the safety of the public, Mrs. Thaw says:

"What an outcry such a sentence would create throughout civilized Europe and throughout free America! There could be no denunciation too severe for the Russian Judge, there could be found no newspaper in the United States or in Europe, outside of Russia, which would dare venture to approve or sustain a sentence so unjust and cruel and so violative of every safeguard.

"Well do I recall the gloomy afternoon of Feb. 1, 1906, when, ill at my hotel, I and my daughter waited in tense anxiety for the verdict. It is not necessary to describe our feelings, nor is it possible to conceive of the horrible shock when less than an hour after we had been telephoned of his acquittal and were expecting him to enter the apartment at any moment, came the fateful message of this tyrannical procedure by the trial Judge.

"Every doctor who has examined my son, seventeen in all," continues the writer, "agrees with the decision of that eminent and able commission of April, 1907, that Thaw 'was and is sane.' This includes Drs. Lamb and Baker, who told him 'there was nothing wrong with his mind,' and assured Dr. Pilgrim and others after they had observed him for over two months that he had never had any delusions and had no paranoia whatever. After Dr. Baker's queer visit to the District Attorney's office in New York in April, 1908, he contradicted himself. Yet nothing is more obvious than that Mr. Jerome and his associates also believe him sane or they would not so persistently have sought to prevent a hearing on his sanity."

Mrs. Thaw then quotes the opinion of Dr. Francis L. Patton, President of Princeton Theological Seminary, who on June 7, before sailing for Bermuda visited Thaw and afterward made an affidavit that he believed him to be sound mentally.

Mrs. Thaw closes with a sketch of her husband, William Thaw, giving an account of his business career, large financial operations in Pittsburg and Allegheny, and of his large benefactions to churches and charities of all denominations. She says:

"Ten thousand citizens of Pittsburg looked into his dead face, and tears were on their faces and more tears were in their hearts as they thought of the burdens he had lightened and the grief he had assuaged and the hopes he had kindled as he had come in touch with their need.

"His life was a testimony to the fact that it was not necessary that a man who accumulates wealth shall forget to cultivate himself. Quick to see opportunities and bold to embrace them, he made his life a conspicuous example of what the world calls success. But he united with it, as is often not done, a high sense of honor, scrupulous fidelity to truth—his word being like his bond, could be trusted always and everywhere; in order to protect libertines, the calumniators referred to in the body of this pamphlet, did not hesitate to attack the memory of this man whose whole life spent in the city of his birth was a living epistle known and read of all men."

JEROME RETURNS TO TOWN.

Won't Refuse to Take a Hand in the Thaw Case, If Asked to Do So.

After a three weeks' canoeing trip in the Adirondacks, District Attorney Jerome and his assistant, Daniel F. Murphy, returned yesterday to their official duties in the Criminal Court Building. Mr. Jerome said that, after transacting some business in town he will go to his Summer home at Lakeville, Conn., for the rest of his vacation.

When the District Attorney was asked if he would take part in the Thaw insanity investigation now going on in the Supreme Court at White Plains, he replied that he was not yet prepared to say. He let it be inferred, however, that if his assistance was asked by Attorney General O'Malley, professional courtesy would not permit him to refuse it.

In speaking of the gambling situation in New York, Mr. Jerome said that a recent report from Assistant District Attorney Smyth, who has been Acting District Attorney in his absence, moved him to reiterate his conviction that no gambling was going on in this city. The District Attorney said he still has the keys of the more important gambling houses of the past, and that his men are regularly inspecting these.

When the recent removal of Commissioner Bingham was brought up Mr. Jerome said he knew nothing about it, except what he had read in the newspapers, and was not prepared to express an opinion. He denied that changes in the Police Department would have the effect of bringing the gamblers back to town.

Mr. Jerome said that his office was taking no official action in the matter of tracing missing millions in the Third Avenue Railroad.

FOR DIRECT NOMINATIONS.

New York County League Formed to Establish Assembly District Branches.

The New York County Direct Nominations League, which will be a branch of the State Association of Direct Nomination Leagues, was organized at a meeting held at the Bar Association yesterday afternoon. Augustus N. Hand, a lawyer, of 49 Wall Street, was elected President; Henry Hochner, an insurance broker, of 59 Malden Lane, Secretary; and Elwood Hendrick, a banker, of 25 Pine Street, Treasurer.

Mr. Hand is a son of ex-Judge Hand of Elizabethport, who sat as referee in the hearings on the charges preferred against District Attorney Jerome. He is an independent Democrat. The other two officials are Republicans of an independent type.

The State Association has opened headquarters at 31 Nassau Street, where it has a clerical force and a depot for the distribution of literature. Leagues have been formed or are in the process of formation in about thirty of the sixty-one counties of the State.

The New York County League will proceed to the formation of branches in each Assembly District in Manhattan and the Bronx, to work for the nomination and election to the Legislature of candidates pledged to the principle of direct nominations, either within or beyond party lines.

Among those who attended the meeting yesterday were Col. Henry W. Sackett, C. Arthur Haightman, George Fentrick, E. Mortimer Boyle, James H. Hickey, Bailey B. Burritt, and James Talcott.

All But $11,000 of It Personalty—Inheritance Tax $10,949.

The estate of O. H. P. Belmont, who died on June 10, is estimated by H. Belmont, his widow, was sole beneficiary under the will, and the amount of inheritance tax to be paid by her is $10,949.

Except three pieces of property at Hempstead, L. I., where Mrs. Belmont lives, the estate consisted entirely of cash and securities, the values of the realty after deducting her dower was only $11,631.

150 shares Night and Day Bank	42,000

Included in the estate were one share in the Newport Horse Show Association and one share in the Rhode Island Jockey Club, both of which are set down as valueless. Mr. Belmont had $6,444.02 to his credit in the Day and Night Bank when he died.

The total value of the personal estate is $1,183,591, from which are deducted funeral expenses, $12,401; debts, $65,694; administration expenses, $13,764, and commissions of executrix, $8,367, a total of $100,227, which makes the net personal estate $1,083,363.95.

Man and Wife Held as Counterfeiters.

Salvatore Brandelone and his wife were arrested yesterday in their tenement at 419 East Eighteenth Street by Secret Service agents and taken before United States Commissioner Shields on a charge of counterfeiting. The Secret Service men seized a lot of molds and other apparatus for making silver quarters. The Commissioner held the pair in $5,000 bail each for examination on Monday. Brandelone is said to have served time for counterfeiting before.

STABS SISTER IN STUDIO.

Mrs. Sutton, Thought Demented, Perhaps Fatally Injures Miss Warren.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 21.—Miss Eliza Warren, an actress and head of a local school of elocution and acting, was probably fatally stabbed to-day by her sister, Mrs. Mary Sutton, who was temporarily demented. The encounter occurred in Miss Warren's downtown studio—in the Republic Building on Euclid Avenue—and caused considerable excitement in the building.

Recently Mrs. Sutton lost a son and she has grieved over his death. Miss Warren has been living at Mrs. Sutton's home, but last night both remained at the studio. Miss Warren was awakened by her sister, who stabbed her three times. In the struggle that followed Mrs. Sutton also was severely cut. Miss Warren was rescued by the building engineer, who burst in the studio door.

Both were taken to a hospital in the same ambulance.

WOULD AVERT WAR IN SOUTH AMERICA

Brazil and Chile to Aid Us in Preventing Hostilities Between Bolivia and Argentina.

APPEAL TO ARMS UNLIKELY

Diplomatic Colony in Washington Considers It a Remote Possibility—Bolivian Minister Leaves Buenos Ayres.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The moral influence of the United States, Brazil, and Chile will be exerted to prevent any clash of arms between the Republics of Argentina and Bolivia. Chile and Brazil will remain neutral in the pending controversy, the former, it is understood, having indicated its attitude to this Government already.

War between the two countries would be very regrettable to the United States, which within proper bounds would do its best to prevent it. The United States, however, will not intervene unless a request is received from one or both nations involved. This has been its consistent policy in such cases.

That there will be much war talk growing out of the pending situation is the expectation of the South American diplomatic colony. That it will end in war they consider a very remote possibility.

MANCHESTER, Mass., July 21.—Señor Don Epifanio Portela, Minister from the Argentine Republic to the United Sates, who is spending the Summer here, received several long dispatches late to-day, which, he believes, have to do with the misunderstanding between Argentina and Bolivia. The dispatches, however, are in code, and as the code book of the legation is in Washington the Minister has been unable to decipher their meaning.

"I don't expect to see any war between the Argentine Republic and Bolivia," said Señor Portela. "although I know the feeling is high. Peru and Bolivia are more apt to appeal to arms than the Argentine Republic and Bolivia. I may say also that Chile has certain interests in the controversy, which are apt to be brought forward."

In reference to the Peruvian-Bolivian boundary dispute Brazilian Ambassador Joaquin Nabuco, who is also here, said:

"As the attitude of Brazil with regard to the recent award between Peru and Bolivia has been called in question, I think I had better state that that award is for us a case of res inter alios adjudicata, but since the arbitrator was chosen by Peru herself, and has decided that the Viceroyalty of Lima did not extend east of the sixty-ninth west meridian of Greenwich, the Peruvian pretension against Brazil has been by that award reduced by a half. Brazil has no reason to complain of the Argentine award."

BUENOS AYRES, July 21.—The Bolivian Minister to the Argentine Republic, Señor Escalier, sailed from here this evening for Montevideo. It is believed that Bolivian interests in this country will be confided to the American Legation. Charles H. Sherrill, the American Minister, had a long conference with the Minister of Foreign Affairs this afternoon, on which, however, he declined to say anything for publication.

Señor Fonseca, the Argentine Minister to Bolivia, has telegraphed the Foreign Minister that he will leave La Paz tomorrow. The newspapers here are unanimous in approving the attitude of the Government and congratulate the Foreign Minister on his latest action.

VALPARAISO, Chile, July 21.—The general opinion among Government officials and military and naval officers here is that Chile will remain neutral in the event of hostilities between Bolivia and Argentina. Chileans, however, express sympathy with Bolivia, in the belief that the decision rendered by President Alcorta was biased, but they are also of the opinion that Argentina does not intend to make war, which would mean a great setback to both countries.

There is no truth in the report that Chile is sending arms to Bolivia. As a matter of fact, it is stated, the Chilean Government will use its good offices to avert war.

LA PAZ, Bolivia, July 21.—The cause of Argentina's breaking off of diplomatic relations, as stated here, is a circular issued by President Montes to the provincial Governors of Bolivia, referring in slighting and offensive terms to Argentina's decision against Bolivia in the pending boundary dispute. Argentina also takes offense at President Montes's orders to the municipality of La Paz to suspend the centenary feasts which have been going on in view of Argentina's adverse action, which is to be regarded as a national misfortune.

The warlike crisis which has suddenly appeared between the Argentine Republic and Bolivia is a result of the heated contention over the rich rubber territory of Acre, lying between Bolivia and Peru. The dispute was finally referred to President Alcorta of Argentina, who recently rendered a decision favorable to Peru.

This brought on demonstrations of intense popular disapproval throughout Bolivia. At the Bolivian capital of La Paz a mob stormed the residence of the Argentine Minister, and at interior points the Argentine Consulates were the centre of indignities.

Argentina hotly protested against these manifestations, and has now severed diplomatic relations with Bolivia.

BRINGING FORTNER BACK.

France Grants Extradition of St. Louis Man Charged with Forgery.

PARIS, July 21.—The Government granted extradition papers to-day in the case of Marion Dwight Fortner, alias William Wells, who was arrested in this city on May 19 at the request of the American authorities, charged with forgery. He will be taken to Havre, where he will be turned over to Sergt. McMullen of the St. Louis Police Department, who came to France to take him back to the United States.

The St. Louis authorities are trying to obtain possession of $1,000 which was placed to Fortner's credit in the name of Wells at one of the Paris banks.

M. Dwight Fortner was a real estate operator of St. Louis, and disappeared from that city last February. He is under indictment charging that he obtained $11,500 by a forged indorsement on a check, and that he forged his wife's signature to several trust deeds.

RUSSIA NOT TO SEND SHIPS.

Will Not Be Represented at New York or San Francisco Celebrations.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 21.—The Russian Admiralty has decided not to send any warships to either the Hudson-Fulton celebration in New York or the festival off San Francisco.

The committee in charge of the Russian naval fund, collected during the Russo-Japanese war by popular subscription, has decided to construct, with the balance of the fund, a torpedo-cruiser of 1,325 tons with a speed of thirty-six knots, and a 500-ton submarine boat.

The total amount of money collected was $8,550,000, and nineteen ships were built.

HARMS HELD FOR TRIAL.

Man Accused of Swindling Bache & Co. Also Up for Bigamy.

LONDON, July 21.—Conrad Harms, alias Henry Clifford, who was arrested in this city recently on the charge of swindling J. S. Bache & Co. of New York out of $8,000, was committed for trial at the Old Bailey to-day on the double charge of bigamy and forgery.

During the hearing H. J. Lyon of the Bache Company, produced a letter written by the prisoner, offering to return the money on condition that he should not be prosecuted, and the matter should not be mentioned in the newspapers or to his friends in New York.

The prisoner reserved his defense.

Post Will be Offered to Former First, but He Is Expected to Decline.

NO CHANGE IN POLICY

Briand the Most Conspicuous Figure in Retiring Cabinet After Clemenceau—Other Ministers to Stay.

PARIS, July 21.—President Fallières will offer the Premiership to Léon Bourgeois, former Minister of Foreign Affairs, tomorrow. This decision was reached late to-night, but as M. Bourgeois is not expected to reach Paris from Hamburg until to-morrow his actual attitude with regard to the appointment is not known. Parliamentary circles, however, foresee that he will decline the honor, as his health is far from robust. Nevertheless the Cabinet crisis promises to be of short duration.

M. Clemenceau, the late Premier; M. Dubost, President of the Senate, and M. Brisson, President of the Chamber of Deputies, have united in advising President Fallières that M. Briand, Minister of Justice and Worship, is the most available man after M. Bourgeois, and it is understood that M. Briand is the President's second choice.

The Parliamentary leaders of the majority told President Fallières to-day that M. Clemenceau's defeat was a personal reproof directed against the Premier for his attack upon M. Delcassé, and that it would not check the policies of the Government, which should be continued.

M. Briand, after Clemenceau, is the most conspicuous member of the retiring Cabinet. Although the temper of the Senate is described as rather cold to the elevation of M. Briand, the attitude of the Chamber is said to be sympathetic. If he is named as Premier it is expected that he will immediately reconstitute the Clemenceau Ministry with Clemenceau omitted and commit himself to following up the programme of reforms laid down by the retiring Cabinet.

On account of the importance of the elections in 1910 M. Briand, like his predecessor, would probably select the portfolio of Minister of the Interior, and in view of the important policies pending and the wisdom of retaining the Ministers in the old departments, few shifts from the previous Cabinets are expected.

M. Caillaux, Minister of Finance, who is directing the battle for the income tax and old age pensions; M. Cruppi, who is busy with the tariff revision; M. Pichon, whose foreign policies satisfy the republican "bloc"; M. Viviani, Minister of Labor, and M. Ruau, Minister of Agriculture, are all slated for retention, although the reappointment of MM. Piquart, Picard, and Milliès-Lacroix to the portfolios of War, Navy, and Colonies, respectively, is less certain, and is not expected.

On the other hand, should M. Bourgeois accept the Premiership, the personnel of the Cabinet is less certain, but it is believed that his incumbency would not affect the present policies of the Government.

The entire political world remains completely stupefied at M. Clemenceau's action yesterday. No one can believe that an old campaigner like Clemenceau did not realize what he was doing, and for this reason many advance the theory that he deliberately planned his own downfall. The general opinion is picturesquely summed up by Henri Rochefort, editor of the Patrie, who says:

"Clemenceau has overthrown so many Ministers that he believed it proper to overthrow himself. He committed suicide yesterday by firing several phrases at his own head."

The approaching visit of the Czar to Cherbourg renders an immediate solution of the crisis imperative, as President Fallières cannot take the members of the retiring Cabinet with him to Cherbourg when the official greeting of France is extended to the Russian ruler.

M. Clemenceau announced this afternoon that he is going to Carlsbad as soon as the new Cabinet is formed.

PART IN CHINA LOAN ASSURED.

Prince Regent Sends Satisfactory Response to Taft's Message.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—President Taft received through the Chinese Legation to-day a cablegram from the Prince Regent of China stating in effect that the Chinese Foreign Office had been directed to take up negotiations with the American Chargé in Peking for the admission of American capital to participation in the railroad loan on equal terms with the bankers of Great Britain, France, and Germany. This cablegram was in reply to one sent by the President several days ago.

This assurance from the Prince Regent seems to settle beyond dispute the question which has agitated foreign and American bankers for several weeks. The negotiations are expected to cover only details as to the particular sections of the projected roads and other enterprises, which are to be pledged as security for the issue of bonds, and also the exact amount of our participation.

PEKING, July 21.—The Russo-Chinese Bank still claims the right to participate in the Hankow Railroad loan in the event of its revision, and threatens to assert its claim to equal rights if a new arrangement is offered by China.

The foreign diplomats do not attach any importance to this action.

PASSENGER SHIP IN PERIL.

Derfflinger, with 100 Aboard, Still Aground Near Southampton.

SOUTHAMPTON, July 21.—The North German Lloyd Line steamer Derfflinger, which grounded on Shingle Bank shortly after leaving this port yesterday, is still aground. Three attempts have been made to tow her off without success. Her cargo is being discharged into lighters, but her passengers to the number of 100 remain on board.

The liner is gradually settling down on the soft Shingle Bank and her position is regarded as dangerous, as the wind is increasing, and the sea roughening. In the event of bad weather the vessel will be exposed to the full force of the waves.

HEARING PANAMA WITNESSES.

No Evidence Likely to be Obtained in Paris Except from Volunteers.

PARIS, July 21.—The commission, composed of Henry A. Wise, United States Dictrict Attorney at New York, and Stuart McNamara, Assistant United States Attorney for the District of Columbia, sent here to obtain evidence in the Panama libel cases, has begun taking the testimony of voluntary witnesses in a room at the American Embassy, which was placed at its disposal by Ambassador White.

By agreement of counsel the sittings are in secret, and no statement regarding the nature of the evidence submitted can be secured for publication.

Beyond this voluntary testimony nothing is likely to be obtained, as the idea of appealing to the French Government for an examination of the records has practically been abandoned.

FRENCH FLAG OVER ABESHR.

Arabs in Congo Country Beaten After Brilliant Engagement.

PARIS, July 21.—Col. Milliot, the military commander of the French forces at Tchad, Central Africa, telegraphs by way of Zinder, French Sahara, that the French flag was hoisted at Abeshr on July 2 after a brilliant action with the Arabs, in which the French had two killed and twenty-three wounded.

Abeshr is the capital of Wadai, a native State, or Sultanate, formerly very powerful and now a protectorate of France, constituting part of the Tchad territory of the French Congo. The population of Abeshr, composed chiefly of Mohammedan negroes and Arabs, is about 10,000.

French Government Buys Painting by Redfield for the Luxembourg.

PARIS, July 21.—"The Canal in Winter," by E. W. Redfield of Centre Bridge, Penn., the only American picture to receive a medal at the Spring Salon of the Society of French Artists, has been purchased by the Government for the Luxembourg Gallery.

PHILADELPHIA, July 21.—Edward W. Redfield was born in Bridgeville, Del., in 1868, and has studied in Paris under Bouguereau and Fleury.

WOMEN IN MADRID RIOT AGAINST WAR

Excited Crowds Charged by Police as Reinforcements Start for Morocco.

CRACK REGIMENTS TO GO

Fighting Around Melilla Is Severe—Moorish Chiefs Warn Spanish Commander to Leave Disputed Territory.

MADRID, July 21.—Great excitement prevails in the Spanish capital. The population is strongly opposed to the Spanish-Moroccan war.

There were several demonstrations in front of the War Ministry to-day and much rioting in the streets, in which women took a prominent part.

The first body of soldiers to reinforce the Spanish troops at Melilla left this city at 3 o'clock this morning. Despite the early hour an enormous crowd had gathered and cries of protest against the departure of the troops were numerous. The police were obliged to charge the people several times before they were dispersed.

Official dispatches from Melilla say the Moors resumed the offensive this morning and seem to be trying to turn the Heights of Atalayon with the object of directly attacking Melilla.

The fighting at Melilla last night was very severe and lasted from 6 o'clock in the evening until daylight. The Spanish losses were heavy.

The crack regiments of the King are now being mobilized.

SEVILLE, July 21.—An infantry brigade was ordered to-day to Melilla to reinforce the Spanish troops there.

MELILLA, July 21.—Moorish tribesmen attacked a Spanish force at the railroad station just outside this town to-day, but were repulsed by means of gatling guns.

Gen. Marina, commander of the Spanish forces in Morocco, has received a letter from the Moorish chiefs warning him that the only way of avoiding a bloody war, prejudicial to the interests of both sides, is by the withdrawal of the Spanish troops from the territory in dispute.

CHURCH BURIAL FOR CARLOS.

Austrian Emperor Gives Consent—Funeral of Pretender To-day.

VARESE, Lombardy, July 21.—Emperor Francis Joseph telegraphed his permission to-day for the burial in the St. Just Church at Trieste of the body of Don Carlos of Bourbon, the Pretender to the Spanish throne.

Many followers of Don Carlos have arrived here from Spain to attend the funeral services, which will be held tomorrow.

Don Jaime, son of the late Pretender, is expected to issue a manifesto to the Spanish people soon.

Willoughby May Get New Post.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, July 21.—William F. Willoughby, Secretary of Porto Rico, sailed to-day on the steamer San Juan for New York. It is reported here that Mr. Willoughby will not return to Porto Rico, but will accept an offer of a post in the Department of Commerce and Labor at Washington.

SUFFRAGETTES KICK AND BITE

They Attack Female Jail Wardens—Some of Them Set Free.

LONDON, July 21.—Six out of fourteen suffragettes who were recently imprisoned in the Holloway Jail for breaking windows at Whitehall have been released on account of insubordination, and Herbert Gladstone, Secretary of State for Home Affairs, intimated in the House of Commons this afternoon that it would be only a few days before all of the women would be turned out, as the "hunger strike" had become general.

Since the women were sentenced to close confinement they have been defying all the prison rules, and now, Mr. Gladstone said, they have taken to kicking and biting the female wardens. The Home Secretary hotly denounced James Keir Hardie's suggestion that the cells underground were insanitary.

Attempts made by the supporters of the suffragettes to adjourn the House, in order to discuss "the infliction of a punishment that was dangerous to the health of the ladies," was defeated by the Speaker, who refused to put the motion on the ground that there had ben no departure from the ordinary administration of law.

LONDON GREETS BLUEJACKETS

Shows Widespread Interest in Presence of Fleet in Thames.

LONDON, July 21.—The bluejackets of the 150 warships now in the Thames were guests of the City of London to-day.

Twelve hundred of them marched through the principal thoroughfares, and as they swung along the route with six guns rattling behind, the record crowds that lined the streets greeted them with unbounded enthusiasm and demonstrated the widespread interest awakened in Londoners by the stay of the fleet in the heart of the City.

REID COMING HOME SOON.

American Ambassador to Sail About Aug. 7 for Vacation Here.

LONDON, July 21.—Ambassador Reid will leave London about Aug. 7 to spend his Summer vacation in the United States.

The chief American delegates, who are attending the International Congress of Nurses in this city, were entertained at luncheon to-day by Mr. and Mrs. Reid.

DOZEN HIPPOPOTAMI ATTACK ROOSEVELT

Natives Rowing His Boat Are Terrorized, but He Kills Two and Drives Off Others.

TOWS SPOIL BACK TO CAMP

Using Launch Sent to Search for Him—Heller Captures Big Leopard in a Wire Trap.

NAIVASHA, July 21.—Col. Roosevelt had an exciting experience yesterday while endeavoring to secure a cow hippopotamus. At 9 o'clock in the morning he went out on Lake Naivasha in a rowboat accompanied by two natives.

After they had rowed some distance from shore the boat was surrounded by a dozen hippopotami who attacked the boat, some of them diving under and striking the bottom of it with their backs.

The natives became terrorized, but Mr. Roosevelt was not dismayed, and selecting the finest bull and the largest cow shot them dead. Eventually the rest of the animals were driven off.

Mr. Roosevelt arrived at the camp at 3 o'clock this morning after towing home the spoil with a launch, which was sent out to search for the rowboat.

Kermit Roosevelt has arrived at Naivasha, but the rest of the expedition will not reach here until to-morrow.

Edmund Heller of Riverside, Cal., the zoologist of the Roosevelt expedition, caught a 130-pound leopard in a wire trap while out shooting this morning.

Talks on Teeth

By G. GORDON MARTIN
(Incorporated)

No Pain at All

We had a letter from a prospective patient recently in which he says he has always credited himself with being "average" brave, but down deep in his heart he knows he is a rank coward when the dentist confronts him.

The fear of the dentist comes from centuries of butchery at the hands of unskillful, or unsympathetic practitioners. It is implanted deeply in the human breast, and it will be some little time before we can overcome this dread.

We have eradicated pain from dental work, partly through superior methods of work, partly through improved appliances, but largely through skill, and careful, sympathetic practice.

Are you a man-afraid-of-the-dentist?

We address the men, because women walk up to the rack in this world, and put mere man to the blush, when pain has to be endured.

But our message to both men and women is a message of good cheer, for we have evolved a new plan of restoring missing teeth through the Martinolar Method, without plates, and without pain of any kind.

No cutting, or boring into the gums, nothing to fear, and when the work is completed, a full complement of teeth that will be a joy forever.

They look like Nature's teeth, when Nature has done her best—even, white, and so close a match for natural teeth, that even dentists are unable to say whether or not they are artificial.

You want that sort, and if so, you should come and have a talk with our examining dentist, and let him look your mouth over without any charge.

We have a handsomely illustrated book entitled "The Martinolar Method," that you should read. We will send it free, if you will drop a card for it.

RACING AUTOMOBILE KILLS A MOTORMAN

Dashes Him to Death as He Stands Beside His Car and Those in It Escape.

BUT THE MACHINE BURNS UP

Police Searching for James Plunkitt, a Chauffeur, Who Is Supposed to Have Been Driving It.

The police of this city and of Yonkers are looking for James Plunkitt, chauffeur for Edward A. Kertschner of 181st Street and Fort Washington Avenue, Washington Heights, on suspicion that he was in charge of Mr. Kertschner's automobile, a racing roadster, early yesterday morning when it struck and killed James Finn, a motorman of a Jerome Avenue trolley car, in Jerome Avenue at the city line.

The automobile was destroyed by fire after it dragged Finn beneath it down into a ditch beside the road, bringing up against a telegraph pole and overturning, but its two occupants managed to escape by leaping from it just before it struck the pole. Beside the car was found an automobile hat, with a license badge attached to it which the police have learned belonged to Plunkitt.

The accident occurred shortly after 1 A. M. It was witnessed by Aloysius Gordon of 159 West 133d Street, and James Mullen of 4,171 Third Avenue, the Bronx, who narrowly escaped being hit by the flying car themselves.

Finn was standing beside his car talking to the two men in the few minutes at his disposal before it was time to start back on a return trip when the automobile suddenly darted out of the dark with a blinding flash of light from its headlights and a roar. Before Finn could step aside it struck him. Gordon and Mullen say that the machine was traveling at a tremendous rate of speed.

Finn was caught up beneath it and dragged along the ground. The automobile did not even slow up, but suddenly swerved off the road and ran into the ditch, an instant afterward striking the telegraph pole. Its occupants jumped and made off into the darkness.

Gordon and Mullen were panic-stricken by the accident which had picked Finn up and carried him off as if by magic. With returning wits they started on a run toward the place where the automobile had taken to the ditch, but before they got there it burst into flames.

The men redoubled their speed, when by the light of the burning car they saw Finn pinned beneath the wreckage in danger of being burned to death. When they reached the car they found that the motorman was so caught that the only hope of extricating him lay in practically removing most of his clothing.

Gordon and Mullen worked with haste, for the flames approached momentarily closer to Finn, and there was danger that the gasoline in the tank of the car might explode. At last they managed to drag the senseless motorman from beneath the car and to a place beside the road, a safe distance away.

Finn's conductor was changing the trolley pole from one end of the car to the other when the accident happened, but when he realized what had happened he sent for an ambulance and the fire engines. The spot where Finn was struck is far away from any hospital, however, and it was half an hour before Dr. Klein could get there from St. Joseph's Hospital. He found Finn already dead. Meantime Engine 7, from Yonkers, had arrived, but the automobile was already a total wreck.

The police redoubled their efforts to find Plunkitt when an interview with Mr. Kertschner made it apparent that the chauffeur, if it were he, had been using the car without permission. Despite this admission from Mr. Kertschner, he gave Plunkitt a good character, describing him as a careful driver.

SIX HEATS TO WIN RACE.

The 2:19 Pacing Event at Parkway Was a Long-Drawn-Out Affair.

The second day's sport at the Summer meeting at the Parkway Driving Park, Brooklyn, was in striking contrast to that of the opening day. On Tuesday Starter Klotz established a record by running off the card in less than two hours, every event being decided in straight heats. In yesterday's races the 2:19 pace went six heats before the event was concluded.

E. D. Hollenbeck carried Baron Delect to the front in the first two heats, covering the second in 2:16¾. This speed killed off the son of Oakland Baron, who went to a break in the third heat, which went to W. H. Coville's Lady Bonanza, which beat out Little Andy by a neck. In the fourth and fifth heats the horses showed the effects of the severe strain and slowed up materially. C. E. Pitman captured the two heats with Dawson Dillon.

Sargent Plays at Van Cortlandt.

George Sargent, who recently won the professional golf championship, played his first practice match over the Van Cortlandt Park course yesterday in preparation for the exhibition match with Gilbert Nichols, which will be played on Wednesday at Van Cortlandt. Elijah Horton was Sargent's opponent, thirty-six holes being played. The first round of the course gave Sargent a card of 77, his unfamiliarity with the conditions handicapping him. The second eighteen holes showed a better score, the total being 73. Horton on the last circuit of the links made 76, and Sargent had him 3 up and 2 to play.

The professional record for the Van Cortlandt Park course is 68, held by Gilbert Nichols, who made the card last year. Sargent's 73 card was:

In ....5 4 4 5 4 3 5 5 5—40—73

TOURISTS RUN IN MUD.

Gliddenites, However, Make 196 Miles, Reaching Council Bluffs.

Special to The New York Times.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, July 21.—The endurance run of the American Automobile Association was little short of a real race to-day over Iowa roads between Fort Dodge and Council Bluffs. The distance was 196 miles, the longest so far. Fifteen miles were added to the original route because the roads and bridges under repair made several roundabout highways necessary.

When twenty miles out from Fort Dodge the Gumbo Road suddenly became boggy, some cars settling down two feet as if on quicksand, but got out under their own power. The roads soon improved, however, but, thinking the change was too good to last, every one put on high gear and many speedometers registered fifty miles an hour at intervals during the balance of the trip. The journey to-day practically ended the danger of serious delay from rains, as west of the Missouri River the conditions are quite different at this time of year.

Luncheon was carried from the Pullman train, so the only stop made was three minutes for gasoline. There were no large places en route. One town passed through was called Glidden, but no special demonstration was made there. The crowds were about as large as on preceding days.

The City of Council Bluffs and the local automobile club sent escort cars out fifty miles, but the clip of the contestants was so brisk the Iowans could not keep in sight. The welcome here was torrid.

A street on Bayliss Park was closed to park the cars, and the Elks fine clubhouse was turned over to the visitors. This evening there was a dinner and a trip to Lake Manawa, fireworks, and band concerts.

The journey to-morrow will be 200 miles, over the Missouri River and through Omaha to Kearney, Neb.

To-day's penalties follow: Marmon No. 4, 6.8; Jewel No. 7, 8.2; Premier No. 53, .8; Brush No. 102, 15.3; Glide No. 10, 1.6; Jewel No. 111, 15; Chalmers-Detroit No. 3, 15; Moline No. 100, 3.15.

RUMSON FIRST TEAM WINS.

Freebooters Defeated in Semi-Final Match for Polo Challenge Cup.

Special to The New York Times.

SEABRIGHT, N. J., July 21.—The semi-final game for the Rumson Challenge Cup was decided to-day on the Rumson Polo Club field, and resulted in a victory for the Rumson First Team over the Rumson Freebooters by 5½ goals to 5. In view of the hollow victory of the First Team over Spring Lake on Monday, the former aggregation was expected to win with little trouble. In this the Freebooters sprung a surprise and the result was in doubt up to the end of the last period.

From the outset the First Team played a strong, aggressive game. H. S. Borden was a tower of strength to his team. He placed the ball with remarkable accuracy, and, thanks to a string of speedy, well-bred ponies, rode off his opponents in excellent style. He was unfortunate in a number of shots, which were well placed but afterward missed by one of his teammates. W. Strothers Jones also appeared to advantage and made several clever runs down the boards, driving hard and riding well. The team work of the First Team was really responsible for the Freebooters' defeat.

The contest was free from fouls, only one penalty being inflicted by Referee Russell Grace. This was charged against the Rumson First, and was more the fault of an accident than design. W. G. Loew put up a good game for the losers.

The line-up and summary:

RUMSON FREEBOOTERS.		RUMSON FIRST.
W. G. Loew	2	W. S. Jones	2
Randall Keator	1	Charles Sabine	1
H. S. Brokaw	3	H. S. Borden	3
R. S. Lawrence	2	Walter McClure	3
Total	8	Total	9

Goals earned—Rumson First, 6; Freebooters, 5. Allowed by handicap—Rumson First, 1. Lost by penalty—Rumson First, ½. Net score—Rumson First, 5½; Freebooters, 5. Referee—Russell Grace.

New York and Quaker Cricketers Draw

PHILADELPHIA, July 21.—The cricket match between the New York Veterans and the Philadelphia Cricket Club Veterans to-day at Manheim ended in a draw. The visitors batted first and scored 214 runs. The local players had scored 190 runs with a loss of four wickets when stumps were drawn.

HILL TOP ROMPS IN FOR THE STAKE

New York Bred Filly Easily Wins the Tarrytown from Lawton Wiggins.

STANLEY FAY'S HANDICAP

Favorites and Second Choices Evenly Divide the Purses at the Yonkers Race Course.

An exactly even division of the Empire City Jockey Club's purses between the favorites and second choices was made at the Yonkers race course yesterday. The division of the prizes between the horses of the East and West was just a trifle less impartial, for the Western stables held to their average of triumphs by winning four races, two of these going to the horses of H. G. Bedwell, owner of the most successful stable that has raced at the Yonkers course this Summer.

There was some consolation for the big crowd in attendance in the fact that the best horses won through the programme, while an Eastern, and, in fact, a New York bred horse, Hill Top, from Stephen and John Sanford's Hurricana Stud, owned by "Rocksie" Angarola, and the most popular favorite of the day, captured the stake feature, the Tarrytown, one mile for three-year-olds.

Hill Top always was the choice, and from a bad send off raced vastly the best horse in the race. She was last when the barrier rose, Lawton Wiggins breaking in front, but she settled down quickly and was moving through the field in the run around the first turn. The horses had hardly turned into the back stretch before Hill Top took the lead from Personal and from there on galloped easily in front, and romped in first by five lengths from Lawton Wiggins, which was the only horse that ever looked like a contender. The Gardener, a winner at the Yonkers track, was outrun from the first jump and finished a poor third.

Richard Reed and Hans, winners for the Bedwell stable on the first day of the meeting, exactly duplicated the performance, both leading all the way, Richard Reed in the first and Hans in the last race. Evening Song ran away from Helen Carroll, the favorite, in the selling sprint for two-year-olds in the first three furlongs, the Whitney filly holding her advantage to the end and winning as she pleased. In the condition race for two-year-olds Fighting Bob, a winner earlier at Yonkers, came on at the finish and won, ridden out to beat Interpose, which made most of the running, the odds on favorite, Glennadeane, being beaten off after breaking in front with all the best of it. To Open Field Stand at Saratoga.

It was announced yesterday that at the coming Saratoga race meeting, the field stand, which by common consent of the race-track owners, has been abolished on all the metropolitan courses this season, is to be opened. The change from the policy adopted by the local race-track managers is said to be a concession to the local patronage at Saratoga and the towns close by—Albany, Troy, and lesser places—which sent a considerable patronage to the Saratoga races as patrons of the cheap inclosure of the field stand.

Horses and Horsemen.

Walter S. Vosburgh, Racing Secretary of The Jockey Club, who under authority from officials of the Epsom race course in England, has received American entries for the Derby and Oaks of 1911, closed yesterday, has announced that he received eighteen nominations for the Derby and sixteen for the Oaks, the chief nominators being James R. Keene, William Astor Chanler, and the Newmarket Stable. The other nominations of American horses by owners who now are racing abroad, notably August Belmont, Harry Payne Whitney, and Herman B. Duryea, naturally will be made direct to the Epsom Secretary.

The weights for the Yonkers Handicap, one mile and a sixteenth, to be run Saturday at the Empire City track, were announced yesterday, with King James the top weight at 129 pounds. The other horses of the thirty-six handicapped that figure in the high weight division are Jack Atkin, 127; Celt, 125; Fitzherbert, 122; Restigouche and Alfred Noble, 110 each; Maltbie, 118; Hilarious, 115, and Joe Madden and Arcite, 112 each.

The well schooled and winning steeplechase horse Sir Wooster has been sold by Robert Neville to A. Henry Higginson on private terms. Mr. Higginson is Master of the Middlesex Fox Hounds, South Lincoln, Mass., and his interest in racing in the past has been in amateur sport.

NEW YACHT RECORD IN LARCHMONT REGATTA

Fleet of 114 Boats Starts in Light Wind on Long Island Sound Course.

THIRD VICTORY FOR AURORA

Yawl Polaris Leads the Schooners and New Marblehead Boat Wianno Wins in Her Class.

All records were again broken in the third regatta on Long Island Sound yesterday of the Larchmont Yacht Club's annual race week. Despite the fickle and tantalizing light wind that prevailed 114 boats started in the various classes, establishing a new record for a Larchmont regatta, beating the former high water mark by three boats. The racing craft went across the line so well bunched in most of the classes as to furnish both excitement and picturesqueness at the start.

The only drawback was the wind. The committee stopped the schooners and the three fifty-sevens after completing one round, while the smaller boats drifted home so lazily that it was evening before the last one was accounted for. Starting off with an easterly breeze, the wind soon switched to the north, then veered to the southeast, and the last boats finished in a southwest breeze.

Cornelius Vanderbilt's Aurora won her third consecutive race. W. Butler Duncan, Jr., was at the wheel this time. She was the last boat to cross the line at the start, but only a few seconds behind Istalena and Winsome, the former getting the lead and the windward berth. All carried baby jib topsails, going out on the starboard tack. Soon after crossing, Aurora went about on the port tack, starting off toward the middle of the Sound, but the others maintained their original course until near the first mark, the first leg being a run to a stakeboat anchored five and a half miles in the middle of the Sound. By clever windward work Aurora rounded the first mark with a narrow lead over Istalena. The second leg to a buoy off Mott's Point was a run with a reach home. The light breezes exactly favored Aurora, and she gained on each leg, beating Istalena by a little less than five minutes. Winsome was eleven minutes behind. The summaries:

How Zeppelin Will Try to Fly to the North Pole

THE remarkable achievements in the air of the famous German aviator are known to all who read. His many long journeys through space have eliminated him from the class of the visionaries. When, therefore, Zeppelin announces his purpose "to explore unknown Arctic regions" by means of his remarkable airship, the announcement deserves and will receive the most serious consideration. The Sunday Times will tell the story of Zeppelin's plan. It has the endorsement and support of the German Emperor, and two of the foremost scientists of Europe will participate in the enterprise. The disappearance of Andree is ignored in the calculations of these Germans. The description of the daring project in The Sunday Times will be accompanied by striking illustration.

Some of the Magazine Features

There will be other features of uncommon value in the forthcoming number of The Sunday Times. There will be the first of several articles by James Creelman on the massacres of Christians in Asia Minor and the meaning of the fanaticism of the Moslems. Mr. Creelman has gone to Turkey to investigate these atrocities. That he will go thoroughly into his subject goes without saying. His articles will be full of information of absorbing interest. Accompanying Mr. Creelman's article next Sunday will be one by Herman Bernstein which will give an interview which that writer has had with the Sheikh-ul-Islam, the religious head of all the Moslems, and at present the dominant head in the evolution of Turkey. Mr. Bernstein's article is a most enlightening document——Some of the other features of The Sunday Times: The story of the life of De Galiffet, a Frenchman who has just died, who embodied all of the romantic imaginings of Dumas——A series of exciting tales of the escapes of those who train wild animals——The story of a girl who at the age of eleven has won the first prize of the Paris Conservatory for Mastery of the Piano——The fourth of Dr. Eliot's "best books for a five-foot shelf" in condensed form, "Bacon's Essays"——Another of the enjoyable letters of "A Japanese Schoolboy," and capital satires by J. W. Foley and Thomas L. Masson——An entertaining talk with Oscar Hammerstein on music——An article of much interest on the spread of the "Own-Your-Own-Apartment" idea in New York City——The plight of the army of actors and their struggle for place——The development of the houseboat and the new types of the same——And many other features.

The Picture Section

The Picture Section of The Sunday Times will have an abundance of interesting pictures, splendidly printed. The great Atlantic fleet at war play in Massachusetts Bay; a page of photographs from the Henley regatta; a fine series of pictures from the Peary North Polar expedition; a page of English and American society women; pictures from the Seattle Exposition; of the Seabright Tennis Tournament; of Summer scenes of unusual attractiveness close to New York; of the Bleriot monoplane, and many other interesting pictures.

Readers of The Times should remember that the Sunday edition should always be ordered from newsdealers in advance.

THE SOUTH AMERICAN QUARREL.

That arbitration tends to avert war is the theory. That it sometimes increases the irritations which cause war is the fact. To the original cause of quarrel over a boundary dispute in South America is now added an alleged insult to the arbitrator whose award is disputed. Argentina seems to think that her honor is concerned in the acceptance of her award depriving Bolivia of territory upon which its heart is set. The fact is that Bolivia's insults to Argentina recoil upon Bolivia. The world not only holds Argentina blameless—upon any facts yet reported—but it would with reluctance pardon Bolivia's exhibition of temper under extenuating conditions. What the world cannot excuse is conduct by either prejudicial to the reign of law in this hemisphere. In the Old World might makes right. It is a bad old custom, and the New World hitherto has set a better example in this and some other, respects.

There is special reason for plain speaking. The time has passed when the world could be faced with an accomplished wrong, and summoned to acquiesce because what was done could not be undone. Now the acts of the morning are read at noon around the globe, and reason can be brought to bear before blood has been actually shed. Not willingly would the United States see wrong done upon this continent, and the carving up of a sister republic would be especially painful. There is no demonstrable wrong which cannot be redressed, and the sanction of American opinion would assure redress upon demonstration, although it would also acquiesce in any result of an appeal to the sword. It would be well for the stronger and the aggressor in any quarrel to remember this, for the weaker may have or may find friends, and the end of the quarrel might be otherwise than anticipated.

There is a tradition that in our frontier courts the Judge sometimes presided with a revolver before him and an impartial eye upon both parties to the quarrel. Argentina appears preparing to use her judicial revolver. It is not the better way thus to take out of the hands of the entire New World the duty of defending her honor, and assuring the execution of her award, if it deserves execution, as is the present presumption. The interest of an impartial Judge ends with his decision. No anger of a disappointed litigant can reach up to his exalted position. And the interpretation of the duties of an arbiter which Argentina's action suggests of course acts to discourage the acceptance of so onerous and honorable a rôle. In short, Argentina should not allow herself to be placed in the wrong, like Bolivia.

This incident perhaps may prove the birthday of a Dreadnought era in America, which needs laws more than navies. The United States hopes for peace between all its friends. It seeks to prevail by arts, not by arms, and throws all its influence in behalf of such conduct by all. It wields no club, and yields to none, and it has profited by persuasion where it might have done worse by force. It urges upon its southern sisters that they shall show a like self-control, in deference to that considerate judgment of mankind to which the United States bows, and has bowed since it has had existence, and will bow while it has a conscience. Otherwise it would dwell in moral isolation. Others may seek peace by the sword, but the United States has preferred to be armed by the justice of its cause. So may it be with its angry sisters. Americans are entirely openminded regarding the merits of the quarrel, which is insignificant compared with the preservation of peace and amity. Whoever breaks the peace of this continent must justify the act or suffer that moral outlawry which neither monarchs, peoples, nor individuals can afford to invite.

THE MAYOR AND THE CODE.

"What an opportunity to commend himself to the really intelligent, disinterested, public-spirited citizenship," said The American Architect in commenting upon the new Building Code a few days ago, when it was supposed that Acting Mayor McGowan would have to decide the fate of that iniquitous measure. That opportunity now passes to Mayor McClellan.

It is demonstrated that the fireproofing provisions of the code will materially increase the cost of building and thereby the cost of living. It will tend to check the growth of the city and to diminish the rate of increase in assessable valuations. The matter has, therefore, a direct relation to the debt margin, to the power of the city to spend money for public works of which it stands in urgent need.

The code is as bad in public policy as it is in private morals, and in view of the well-justified suspicions that it originated in a project to fill Tammany pockets at the public expense, that is putting it pretty strong. The decent part of this community expects a veto from Mayor McClellan, and will applaud him for the act.

QUICK TRANSIT AND THE WORKERS.

Three minutes from the river bank in Jersey City to Broadway, by the newly opened Hudson River tunnels, means that many thousands of workers in this city who live across the Hudson can get from their homes to their shops or offices in ten or fifteen minutes. Many more thousands are now able to make the journey from home to their work in half an hour. The fogs and ice on the river and the other causes of delay on the ferries will no longer trouble them. Not so many years ago men who dwelt in Brooklyn and worked in Manhattan traveled to the ferries on slow-moving horse cars, and in bad weather frequently spent three or four hours daily getting to and from their work. They now have bridges and a tunnel and electric cars that bring them quickly into the heart of Manhattan.

How much better off are the young men of this hour than their fathers were? Their comforts are much greater, their discomforts proportionately less. But do they make better use of their time, does the gain in time secured to them give them more money, are they more cultivated mentally than the horse-car and ferry-boat toilers of the last generation?

It is difficult to make comparisons between the New York of the era before the first East River bridge was built and the New York of to-day. The aspect of Broadway, Wall Street, lower Nassau Street, and all the contiguous thoroughfares is greatly changed. The volume of business has swelled enormously. But there were giants in those days, though they were not sheltered in such gigantic buildings. The methods of work have changed. Unquestionably the average of education among the toilers is higher; that is to say, the percentage of men serving as clerks, cashiers, bookkeepers, managers, salesmen who have been to college is larger. Whether or not the clerks of to-day know more that is of use in their business than their predecessors of the last century is an open question. They need to, if they are to succeed in life, because of the keener competition now and the need of real constructive ability or initiative to secure substantial success. But the compensation is in the increased facilities for work, the rapid transit, the improved office conditions.

There are no available statistics to show how man has been improved by the development of conveniences of living, work, and travel. There are no records on which to base a comparison of late morning arrivals at the offices to-day with those of the days when tardiness was often excusable. Men ought to be growing more useful every day. But easy conditions and luxuries have not always worked that way.

THE CHAMPLAIN MONUMENT.

The assistance which our esteemed contemporaries in many States are volunteering to enable New York and Vermont to decide where the Champlain monument shall stand attests a National interest in the subject. We note with pleasure an approximation toward an acceptable adjustment. Originally Vermont was willing to provide the site if the New York Commissioners would accept it. They were almost persuaded by the canny proposal, but upon second thoughts developed ideas of their own in favor of a site in New York. This put Vermont in the position which New York had held, and developed a deadlock which held the promise that Champlain might have two monuments, and the threat that he might realize neither of them through the rivalries in his honor.

President Taft made the humorous suggestion that a colossal statue should be erected with a leg in each State. Like most of Mr. Taft's jests, it contains a serious suggestion, namely, that Vermont has no monopoly of discovery by Champlain. He discovered both sides of the lake, and thus preceded Hudson's discovery of New York by a few months. Even the Vermont newspapers see this, and are now in a negotiating frame of mind. They no longer insist upon a Vermont site, but are willing to compromise upon some island in the lake. Theoretically New York cannot object, but a centrally located island would make the monument visible to the fewest number, perhaps to none except pilgrims. How many pilgrims would visit an island shrine? The answer is—fewer than visit the shrines within earshot of Broadway.

This monument should not be erected primarily for those who would seek it out because of their special interest in it. It is not enough that the site should have commanding natural advantages—the monument not the site is the thing in this case. It should be placed on a thoroughfare for travel, as like as possible to that of Liberty in our harbor, which commands inquiry as to what the statue means. If the site is near both boundaries, so much the better.

Any settlement which provides a statue is better than one which provides none, or which divides interest by producing two of inferior placing and separately less commanding than a united memorial. The United States—as well as New York and Vermont—owes it to the world to provide memorials like this. They assist in marking those focal points of interest which attract New World travelers as those of the Old World attract Americans across the ocean. Traditions are never outgrown or outworn. They improve with age. That is the reason why the Champlain monument cannot begin to grow old too soon.

CLEMENCEAU'S MISSTEP.

There are two categories of great men—those who are made by the occasion and those who make it. Dr. Georges Clemenceau belongs to the latter. For years he was a thorn in the side of successive Moderate French Ministries, then to him was left the thankless task, as Minister of the Interior, of carrying out the legislation of the Waldeck-Rousseau and Combes Governments. His succession to the Premiership of M. Sarrien in October, 1906, was brought about by the conditions he himself had created as an executive reformer. As he had turned a face of uncompromising dignity toward the Vatican, so now he turned the same visage toward Germany.

Then he set to work to create more occasions. He recovered the defeat that France had suffered through M. Delcasse at Algeciras and a Morocco treaty was made with Germany. He forced the labor unions to show their power and then set to work to prevent that power from becoming a national menace. From every crisis that he created he emerged with stronger legislative backing. And then he descended to a personal quarrel with Delcasse, who had many friends. These friends, in the heat of the moment, defeated him.

It was not a question of policy or even of politics which led up to this misstep. None is likely to follow it. It is entirely a personal matter. Dr. Clemenceau created an occasion which his friends were not numerous enough to master. He may not soon return to continue his creation of occasions as Premier, but his career is by no means ended. Politically, his one, entirely personal, misstep has hardly any significance. Three months ago it would have been different.

KEEPING OUT THE GYPSIES.

George Borrow often cast longing eyes on America, and believed in its future as a land of freedom. It was to America that the splendid Amazon of the Staffordshire dingle, Isopel Berners, fled when she passed forever out of the life of Lavengro. Borrow never dreamt that entrance to the portals of the free Republic would be denied to his favorite people, the Gypsies. Commissioner Williams is quite justified, by precedent, in refusing admission to the band of twenty-four Roumanian Gypsies, who, after a profitable season of horse-trading and fortune-telling in South America, came hither by ship to work their way across the continent. We have too many unproductive nomads now, of course, and people who come here from foreign lands are expected to do their share in developing the industries of the country and become good citizens.

Yet, obviously, every one of the six men in this company might have passed the vigilant eyes of the guardians of the port if he had dropped his tribal relations for the time being and proclaimed himself horseshoer, tinker, or poultry farmer. They had $1,500 to divide, and each of the twenty-four could have displayed much more than the sum required by an immigrant to pass the Ellis Island authorities. Surely a human being cannot be kept out of this country merely because he is suspected of being a Gypsy. The Roumanian band made a mistake in trying to enter with their Gypsy flag flying.

The undesirability of Gypsies as immigrants has not hitherto agitated the country. Their encampments in agricultural neighborhoods may occasionally be troublesome to the farmers, but they are not nearly as bad as native-grown hoboes. They may pilfer, but they do not commit crimes of violence, except in English melodrama when the wicked younger son of a noble lord is invariably the instigator of those crimes. They have no Mafia or Black Hand cults in their tribes. According to Borrow their women are not immoral. The surviving Gypsies link modern civilization with the remote past. They are a strange, picturesque people, and although the Commissioner of Immigration cannot give welcome to nomadic strangers who have no desire to become citizens, we should be sorry to lose the Gypsies altogether.

HAMMERSTEIN DISCIPLINE.

Mr. Hammerstein proposes, in his effectively imperial way, to discipline the expensive singers of foreign lands as they have never been disciplined before. From Catalani to Calve, from Mario to Caruso, they have generally had their own way with the managers of opera, quickly reducing them to submission if they dared to exert their authority. Mr. Hammerstein is willing to pay large wages to good singers, but he demands of them in return the best they can give. They cannot sing, in the months they are away from New York, in Buenos Ayres, Madrid, Naples, and Berlin and return in the Autumn with tired and worn voices to fill their American engagements.

This is the new Hammerstein rule, and a good one. If he succeeds in establishing it he will deserve the gratitude of our operagoers. But he is fixing a limit to the earning capacity of a fine voice, he is raising an important economic question, and an international one. Berlin, Buenos Ayres, Madrid, and Naples will be interested and annoyed. They, too, want the great singers, and if Mr. Hammerstein goes on from year to year engaging all the singers the Metropolitan Opera House does not actually need, and some that it does need, and enforces his rule that out of New York they may sing only a few times in Paris and London, what will the rest of the world do?

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Substituting Tyranny for Liberty.

Cooper Union audiences are supposed to represent "the people," but we are reluctant to admit that they do, for if so "the people" are in desperate need of more than a few lessons in the fundamental principles of fair play and intelligent discussion. Very often, if not almost always, these gatherings either fail, or more or less violently refuse, to hear both sides of the questions which they pretend to have under consideration. Indeed, far too frequently, the mere assertion that a question has two sides is angrily resented, and the favorite method of meeting the facts presented or the arguments made by an unpopular speaker is to howl him into silence every time he opens his mouth.

Not many of the men and women who attend the Cooper Union meetings are direct descendants of the Puritans, but they must be somehow related to those worthies, since they have about the same notions as to freedom of speech and opinion. In other words, they passionately desire and demand liberty for themselves to do and say what they please, but even more passionately they assert and exercise what they assume is their right to prevent anybody else from doing or saying anything that displeases them.

These peculiarities were well illustrated at the meeting held Tuesday evening to discuss the Building Code. Now it is not our purpose to commend that code or to condemn the Cooper Union folk for suspecting it as more likely to conserve private than public interests. The sinister origin of the document warrants that suspicion and the criticism it has received strengthens the suspicion. Nevertheless, it is still deserving of open-minded discussion, and obviously there can be no such thing unless its friends as well as its foes are heard. But such was not the view of Cooper Union. It refused to let even one advocate of the measure say what he could in its behalf, and, so far as it could, demonstrated that the people present were better fitted to live under—and to conduct—a Government like that of Abdul Hamid than to play the part of American citizens.

By acting in this foolish way they deprive themselves, among other things, of whatever chance there was of demolishing Mr. Moore's defense of the code, and that gentleman can fairly say that, whether his arguments were unanswerable or not, they remained unanswered, which comes to much the same thing so far as reaching a just conclusion goes. It seems to us, therefore, that the privileges of Cooper Union are being seriously abused, and that as expressions of public sentiment its meetings are apt to become worse than farcical. Only a Jerome is able to get a hearing there without recognizing the finality of prejudice and prejudgment.

Muscle Is a Means, Not an End.

William Muldoon and all the other experts on athletics whom we quoted yesterday agreed as to the injurious effects of excessive exercise and on the necessity for caution, especially in the case of young boys, in selecting participants in competitive sports and games. Most of them, too, agreed as to what they called the dangers which follow the abandonment of "training." What they seemed to ignore, as we view the subject, was the very important fact that physical development should be carefully adapted to the life which each individual must or prefers to pursue.

Nothing could be more delusive than the idea that by a period of athletic training a man can lay in a stock of health and strength upon which he can draw later while engaged in a sedentary occupation. The truth is that the big muscles and hypertrophied heart of the athlete are perilous possessions for the man who no longer has the time or the inclination for using them. When he stops the exercises by which he gained them, instead of simply returning to their original size, they suffer one or another of the many forms of degeneration and become incapable of performing even their original services.

It is not quite true that all exercise for its own sake is harmless, for it is well to be prepared for the meeting of life's little emergencies as well as its ordinary and daily demands, but it probably is true that, the emergencies apart, every man does enough in going about his customary business and pleasure to keep himself in the condition which that business and pleasure demands, and that anything besides is superfluous or injurious. That athletics take one into the open air is less a commendation of athletics than an indictment of our houses, offices, and stores for lack of adequate ventilation. If all the air we breathed were pure air we could get along well enough without any open air at all. Any man who has the muscle he needs for doing the things he wants to do and should do has all the muscle he ought to have. To acquire more is a silly waste of time, and perilous besides.

Preparing a Warm Welcome.

How the Southerners, remembering the many severe lectures they have received for objecting to the presence of colored troops in their towns, will joy over the news that the Vermonters are equally resentful of such propinquity when forced to endure it themselves!

The mere announcements of the War Department's intention to station the Twelfth Cavalry at Fort Ethan Allen has started the citizens of Burlington, many of them the descendants of militant abolitionists, to clamoring for "Jim Crow" street cars and for the exclusion of negroes from the city's restaurants. They haven't even waited to see whether the colored brother will behave well or ill; they only know by instinct that they do not want him too close to them in any considerable numbers, and the "race prejudice" which they have so often denounced now assumes for them the guise of proper self-respect, based on intrinsic ethnic superiority.

All regard for consistency has been thrown aside, and The Burlington Free Press does not hesitate to say that "if the Government officials thought that the extreme North would make no objection to the presence of so large a body of negroes they were in error." And it adds: "A Southern town could hardly be more up in arms than this city and Winooski are to-day."

We will await with interest and high expectations the comments of the Southern papers on this episode.

MRS. DUN'S CASE.

Declares the Customs Officer Was Entirely Within the Law.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

For the benefit of "American" and others who know as little as he does about customs laws and customs methods I have to say that "to one who knows" his letter is full of misleading statements.

To begin with, Mrs. Dun's property was properly seizable because of no declaration or formal entry. But ever since President Roosevelt took a hand in the administration of the customs laws, beginning in his message to Congress denouncing methods of special agents, the customs officers have been very lenient toward importers. Formerly, if an examiner thought the valuation of an invoice too low, he advanced the value, and the importer had his remedy, which I shall discuss later. Now, if the same examiner thinks the value too low, he telephones the importer or sends for him and says: "If you can get me a certificate of Chamber of Commerce at ——, or this and that, sustaining your valuation I will pass the entry correct, otherwise I will advance." In other words, the examiner or Appraiser arbitrarily takes upon himself the position of judge. I do not object to this as justice, but I simply show that customs officers go outside of the law in favor of importers these days.

Mrs. Dun's case to point. As I said above, the goods were properly seizable, and what did the Collector do? He reconciled himself and his conscience this way, also outside of the dictate of the law: He considered a regular entry had been made and the value advanced 50 per cent., but allowed no appeal from the valuation because, technically, there was no formal entry. Mrs. Dun probably said, "Yes, I have goods," in a bravado way, "and I want the whole world to know it, but I refuse to enter them at a valuation so that the proper duty may be assessed." Then all Mrs. Dun could do was to pay penalty and take her goods.

But, ordinarily, every person has a right to appeal from the valuations made by the customs officers in due time to a United States General Appraiser, and if still dissatisfied, to a Board of United States General Appraisers, (the decisions of which The Times frequently prints,) where he may be represented by counsel or not, and to whom he may present such evidence and information as he desires to sustain his valuation or seek a reduction of the higher valuation. On the whole, in conclusion, the present Administration is too lenient to suit some people.

POLICE COURT REFORM.

Good Features of the Bill Introduced Last Spring.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a silent spectator and student of municipal affairs and politics, your article in The Times of Sunday, July 18, 1909, entitled, "More Police Courts Required," and relating to the draft bill drawn by Justice Charles F. MacLean and introduced in the Legislature by Senator Grady, has appealed to me as being a most commendable measure and one long needed. The many radical changes in the police court system incorporated in the bill specifically aim to remedy the defects long existent. It seeks, among other things, for the immediate hearing of all prisoners arrested, the abolition of all police court records of persons discharged, the enforcement of city ordinances, and a general economy and simplification in the administration of its functions.

It is hoped that public sentiment will be aroused to such an extent, demanding the reforms enumerated, that the bill will successfully pass through the Legislature next Fall.

MANUEL J. NEUFELD.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In enumerating the benefits that will accrue to the community from the sweeping police court reforms proposed by Judge MacLean, sight has been lost of the fact that the bill will also work wonders in promptly checking the "system" of the professional bondsmen and police court sharks that is luxuriantly thriving upon the timidity and helplessness of the innocently arrested. I fear this "system" will prove a factor to defeat the proposed reforms in the Legislature.

HOME FOR OVERWORKED.

Need for a Provision to Allow Long Period of Rest.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The good work which has been done through your columns for workers over 50 years of age encourages me to hope that you will permit me to put before the public another need for which there seems to be no provision.

That need is for a free temporary home for over-strained workers, especially women brain-workers. The "old ladies' homes" are intended for lifelong resorts and are hedged in with admission and other rules which close their doors to the class of workers of whom I write.

Many women, after years of work, reach a stage of mental and physical exhaustion which need not be a complete breakdown. A year or more of perfect rest and freedom from anxiety about daily bread would in most cases restore such women to health and usefulness. As a rule self-supporting women are supporting also some other members of their families, and are so unable, even with so-called high salaries, to save anything, and this notwithstanding great and constant economy. I know whereof I speak in this matter, having had opportunity to observe many such cases.

There is crying need for such a provision, and many physicians would subscribe to this statement. Is there no one gifted with benevolence and large wealth, who would feel blessed in being able to restore to usefulness such over-tired and temporarily incapacitated workers, who otherwise must continue in harness till they fall into a condition which in a short time must send them to a "home for incurables" and entail mental suffering which is even worse than the bodily pain?

New York, July 20, 1909. A. K.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Glad to see you to-day pat Samuel Johnson on the back. I believe you are all right as to Samuel, but, look you here, in the very column in which you say that Johnson had "an astonishing knowledge of our language"—I presume you mean the English language—you have an article on Bar Harbor and the automobile in which you say "the other three towns," &c.

Now, if Johnson were alive, and a lively member also of The Times staff, I believe, in writing that article, he would have said "the three other towns." Again: In The Times account of the drowning of several Scandinavians yesterday in the lower bay is the following sentence:

"Six of the worst sufferers were put to bed and the other three went home."

Johnson in writing that sentence, I believe, would have written the "three others" or "three other persons," because the "other three" implies that the sufferers who were put to bed were three persons.

Anyhow, hurrah for Samuel Johnson's "astonishing knowledge of our language" and for The New York Times, which is the best family newspaper published in the metropolis!

COLER REMOVES MOORE.

Brooklyn Building Superintendent Accuses Chief of Playing Politics.

Superintendent of Buildings David F. Moore of Brooklyn was removed from office yesterday by Borough President Coler, who last week suspended him on charges of neglect of duty and discourtesy to citizens having business with his bureau. In announcing the removal Mr. Coler said that he had asked Moore for an explanation and had received from him "only a cheap political diatribe."

Mr. Moore denied all of the charges. He asserted that he had not improperly absented himself from the meetings of the Building Code Commission, and declared that he had voted for the adoption of the code, which is now under fire, under instructions from Coler.

"You are going to remove me," said Moore, "because I have tried to do my duty instead of disregarding my duty for your political benefit. You are about to remove me because I refused to remove an official whom you charged with being a McCarren man, and because I suspended O'Neill, and because I demanded the resignation of your alter ego, Mr. Anderson."

Mr. Moore called the attention of the Borough President to the fact that as late as June 29 Mr. Coler, testifying before the Commissioners of Accounts, had highly praised Moore.

On that occasion Mr. Coler said:

"I have not received a serious complaint against him. We have had complaints that he is too strict and makes bad friends for the administration, but none more serious."

ALASKAN CONDITIONS.

A Good Place for a Man Without a Thousand Dollars.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with considerable interest in recent issues of your paper, first, a published interview with Daniel Guggenheim advising young men to go to Alaska, and, second, a communication referring to the same signed "F. B.," which, by its incompleteness, seemed to me unfair. As an American who has had a considerable experience in Alaska, and who thoroughly believes it has the most wonderful possibilities of any pioneer country in the world, I should like to correct what I am afraid might be an erroneous impression left by "F. B."

His premise that no man should go to Alaska unless provided with at least $1,000 above all expenses would lead the man with less than that amount to hesitate and balk at the venture, when, as a matter of fact, a man with $1,000 and expenses has the whole globe to choose from. Alaska always struck me as the place for the man who did not have $1,000 and expenses It is undoubtedly the land of "The Poor Man's Opportunity," and in thousands of instances has so proved.

Most old-timers in Alaska would say, and I have heard many of them make the statement, that they "couldn't see why in the name of heaven strong men would stay in the congested cities of the East and work for poor wages, when, with four or five hundred dollars, they could pull out for Alaska and be independent." Personally, if I were to-day reduced to only $500, and had nothing better in sight than securing employment in New York, I would unhesitatingly take the first train for Alaska, secure in the belief that I could pay my fare as I went, and, after arriving at my destination, have money enough to sustain me in a state of independence until I could make more money. That would be going on about $1,250 less than "F. B." declares necessary. I went into Alaska before the big gold rush, and had less than that to start with from San Francisco—about $20 after my fare was paid—and no outfit other than clothing.

It would be foolish, however, to advise any one else to make such an endeavor, for I was brought up in the Far West, was familiar with mining, and, above all, knew how to rough it and yet survive. Alaska is and will be for years to come a paradise for the Westerner of that class and with that knowledge, whether he has a dollar or not. It isn't money that counts in a struggle with the primitive; it is physical strength, adaptability, industry, and pluck.

More Trouble with Smoke.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your issue of Tuesday contains the plea of "A Sufferer" for relief from the soft coal smoke nuisance along Riverside Drive. I suggest that he try the local Department of Health.

Months ago I wrote to the Commissioner, calling his attention to the floods of black smoke that arose from the Interborough and Edison Companies' power houses morning and night, whenever the "load" was on. To this he replied that "the matter would be investigated." After a month or so I asked for a copy of the report of his "investigators." And I'm still waiting. And the smoke is still rolling out.

ANOTHER SUFFERER.

Medical Examination of Aliens.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Now that a general reformation is promised over at Ellis Island, it may be timely to suggest there might very well be more regard for the immigrant's rights and safety as well as our own, especially calling attention to one shocking instance of the mote and the beam.

Not long ago the writer, looking down from the balcony on the helpless droves of humanity driven through the Government's lanes, was almost as amazed as indignant at seeing the same unwashed hands examining sound eyes immediately after handling diseased ones. If there was the slightest precaution it was not visible from above. Surely the humane would like to know.

Bishop Williams's Sermon.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It surprises me to find that the Fourth of July sermon of Bishop Williams, which you published in your Sunday issue, July 11, has aroused so little public interest. Surely it is a subject worth considering, and it would be a deplorable fact if the Nation has become so conceited by its past achievements that it is unwilling to give any serious thought to its faults. I sincerely hope the fate of the reverend doctor will not be that of nearly all prophets of great truths, as a much better future would be assured for America if there were more strong men of his type.

"FEELIN' FINE."

"Feelin' fine," he used t' say,
Come a clear or cloudy day;
Wave his hand an' spill a smile,
Keepin' sunny all th' while;
Never let no bugbears grim
Git a wrastle-holt on him,
Kep' a smilin', rain or shine,
Tell you he was "feelin' fine."

"Feelin' fine," he used t' say,
Wave his hand an' go his way;
Never had no time t' lose,
So he said, in fightin' blues;
Had a twinkle in his eye
Always when a-goin' by,
Sort o' smile up into mine,
Tell me he was "feelin' fine."

"Feelin' fine," he'd allus say,
An' th' sunshine seemed t' stay
Close by him, or else he shone
With some sunshine of his own;
Didn't seem no clouds could dim
Any happiness for him,
Allus seemed t' have a line
Out for gladness—"feelin' fine."

"Feelin' fine," I've heerd him say
Half a dozen times a day,
An' as many times I knowed
He was bearin' up a load;
But he never let no grim
Troubles git much holt on him,
Kep' his spirits jest like wine,
Bubblin' up an' "feeling fine."

"Feelin' fine—" I hope he'll stay
All his threescore thataway;
Lettin' his demeanor be
Sech as you could have, or me
Ef we tried, an' went along
Spillin' little drops o' song,
Lettin' rosebuds sort o' twine

APPROVES REFORMS OF EQUITABLE LIFE

Superintendent of Insurance Hotchkiss Praises Company in Report.

WANTS DETAILS CHANGED

Apparent Discrimination Among Policy Holders in Free Tontine Class—Must Fix Officers' Salaries Annually.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 21.—Summarizing the salient facts brought out by an examination of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, the report of which has been filed with the State Insurance Department, Superintendent of Insurance Hotchkiss, in a letter to Paul Morton, President of the society, criticises the company on several matters, although he states that the examination "warrants the statement that your society is rapidly adjusting itself to new conditions and in important particulars is strictly observing the amended law, and that, therefore, aside from the practices criticised in the report and this letter, it is entitled to the confidence of its policy holders and of this department."

The examination was begun early last October and inasmuch as it was the first conducted by the Insurance Department since the Armstrong insurance investigation, the observance by the Equitable of the so-called Armstrong laws is emphasized in the report, which is on the condition of the society at the time of its last annual statement, Dec. 31, 1908.

Superintendent Hotchkiss, in his letter, comments with approval on the fact that the company is no longer chiefly interested in large totals or the volume of its business. He calls attention to its statistics as to terminations from lapse, surrender and the like, which this year are but one-third of what they were in 1905, which suggests, he says, that the company has recovered from the effects of the investigation, and that it no longer indulges in high-pressure methods which would put on its books much insurance of a temporary character.

Favorable comment is also made on the fact that during the past three years under the Armstrong laws the company shows a gain in assets of approximately $50,000,000 and in surplus of upward of $11,000,000.

In connection with Section 97 of the insurance law, which limits the amount which an insurance company may expend for new business, while calling attention to the comment of the examiners that the expense ratio of this company has been in the past rather high, the Superintendent also observes that its expense for new business in 1908 was $82,000 less than the limit fixed by Section 97, and the expense on total business upward of $3,500,000 less.

Criticism is directed at the company, among other things, for not heretofore having treated alike all policy holders in the free tontine class in the matter of granting cash surrender values and paid-up insurance on lapsed policies. The report itself, Superintendent Hotchkiss says, gives many instances of apparent discrimination. As the result of the hearing on the report a few days ago, the company adopted new rules which the Superintendent says will result in all policy holders being treated alike, both in this matter and as to other discriminatory practices of minor importance, brought out by the report.

Superintendent Hotchkiss also directs attention to what he deems a violation of Section 100 of the insurance law, in that, though this section requires life insurance companies to grant loans on collateral only through its Boards of Directors or Finance Committees charged with that duty, yet in this company such loans have been granted by the President under the authority of a resolution of the board. In this connection Superintendent Hotchkiss says:

"It has been stated that a strict compliance with this section will prevent life insurance companies from making loans of this character. I trust this is so. The less such companies attempt to perform the functions of discount banks, the less likely a recurrence of conditions developed in recent years. The society's experience with collateral loans during the panic of 1907, as indicated in the examiners' report, should demonstrate to it the undesirability of investments of this class, particularly when cash is most needed."

The Superintendent calls attention to the section of the law requiring companies of this kind to fix the salaries of their officers at least every twelve months, and, after noting that this has not been the practice of the Equitable, practically directs the company to observe the law, especially in view of the large salaries paid certain of its officers.

Attention is also called to an expenditure of about $13,000 a year in connection with the trusteeship created by Thomas F. Ryan, the majority stockholder of the company, particularly to a salary of $6,000 paid to the Secretary of the Trustees. The validity of this expenditure is still under consideration by the Insurance Department.

Real estate held by the company in this and other countries not necessary for the accommodation of its business as well as its holdings in railroads, banks, trust companiees, and other stocks is mentioned, but apparently put over for further discussion, after the detailed lists of such realty and stock holdings recently called for shall have been furnished.

HARTFORD LIFE LOSES CASE.

Insurance Company Required by Judgment to Distribute $1,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 21.—The Hartford Life Insurance Company was to-day ordered by Judge Shumway of the Superior Court to distribute among the policy holders of the Hartford Life and Annuity Company a million-dollar fund claimed by both the company and the policy holders.

The Hartford Life and Annuity Company was bought by the Hartford Life, which declared that it owned a million-dollar safety fund which was being raised by the former company. The policy holders of the Annuity Company asserted that the terms of their policies ordered the sum to be distributed among them when it reached $1,000,000. The suit has been in the courts fourteen years. The company's claim was that the responsibility ended with the payment by it of the face value of the certificates as they matured at the time of death.

Harriman's Cousin Left Only $15,000.

The will of James Harriman, Jr., "otherwise known as James Arden Harriman," as the petition accompanying it reads, a cousin of E. H. His wife, Adele Lesher Harriman, who lives at the Colony Club, Madison Avenue and Thirtieth Street, gets the entire estate, said to be valued at about $15,000, and is made sole executrix, to serve without bonds. Mr. Harriman was the son of James Harriman of Washington, D. C., was graduated from Princeton in 1880 and was a member of the Knickerbocker, University, and New York Yacht Clubs.

TO TEACH THE POOR HOW TO KEEP WELL

Women Physicians Organize to Prevent Disease Instead of Curing It.

SCOPE OF WORK NATIONAL

Dr. Rosalie Morton of This City Heads Movement—Dr. Dolley, an M. D. Since 1851, Honorary Chairman.

A new organization of women physicians, members of the American Medical Association, has just been formed to teach the poor how to avoid disease. At the recent annual meeting of the American Medical Society in Atlantic City, it was suggested that the women of that body form an organization to carry on work which individual members have been doing for some time, and, as a result, the new Public Health Education Committee was founded.

Dr. Rosalie Slaughter Morton of 6 East Fifty-eighth Street was chosen as Chairman of the Executive Committee, and it was at her house yesterday that members of the committee from many sections of the country met to discuss the organization and its plans.

Dr. Sarah R. Adamson Dolley of Rochester, who was graduated from a medical school in 1851, and is the oldest practicing woman physician in America, has been made honorary Chairman of the body. The other members are Dr. Evelyn Garrigue, 616 Madison Avenue, Secretary; Dr. Emma C. Hackett, 1,700 Broadway, Treasurer; Dr. Lillian K. South, Bowling Green, Ky.; Dr. Laura Liebhardt, Denver, Col.; Dr. Margaret Holliday, Austin, Texas; Dr. Sarah Craig Buckley, Chicago; Dr. Rose Talbott Bullard, Los Angeles, Cal., and Dr. Anna Lee Hamilton, Boston, Mass.

"This Executive Committee will outline the work," said Dr. Morton yesterday. "Of course, every woman member of the American Medical Association also belongs to this organization. For years we have individually been working to prevent the spread of typhoid fever, to procure pure milk in the feeding of infants, and to prevent blindness, tuberculosis, &c.

"This movement will be directed against these illnesses, and many more, but now the action will be concerted. Physicians will give much of their time to lecturing to the poor and teaching them how to avoid sickness. Much philanthropic work, especially, will be directed toward the mothers in the slum districts."

The new organization has no more enthusiastic member than Dr. Dolley, who is staying with Dr. Morton at present. Next week she will leave for Vermont to see her great-grandchild, little Augustin Saint-Gaudens, Homer Saint-Gaudens's child, who was born about two weeks ago.

Dr. Dolley told a reporter for THE TIMES about the difficulties she encountered in beginning the practice of medicine.

"Only one woman before me," she said, "had ever attempted to practice medicine. She was Elizabeth Blackwell. Naturally there was a great deal of feeling about it.

"When I was very young I was sitting on my uncle's lap one day watching the wheels of his watch go round, and I wondered later, whether a woman could put a watch together like that. That was my first impulse toward a professional career. Quite accidentally I studied physiology in school, and made up my mind at once that I would be a physician. I received the encouragement at that time of Bartholomew Fussell, the father of Dr. Grace Anna Lewis, who is now 87 years old, and when I heard of her last she had just commenced to study about the respiration of fishes!

"My father was a Quaker. When he learned what I wanted to do he drove away and returned presently with a skeleton in a box. Later he had a room added to the house so that I could work more easily.

"'Sarah,' he said, 'if this is not a fancy of thine, I'll do anything for thee that I'd do for thy brother.'"

Dr. Dolley has been practicing ever since 1851.

BAYSHORE HORSE SHOW TO-DAY

Long Island Set Expected Out in Force—Five Big Trophies.

The annual Summer exhibition of the Bayshore Horse Show Association will begin to-day at Oakwood Park, L. I. Five big trophies constitute the most important features of the show, and, as many of the best horses now being shown on the Summer circuit have been entered, the affair is expected to eclipse all previous efforts of the management. All the parking spaces have been engaged and many of the seats in the grand stand, while the boxes will be filled with representatives of the hunting and Summer colony on Long Island.

Clarence W. Watson of Baltimore, who has just returned from England, where his horses captured two championships and more than fifty ribbons, has entered his entire stable of high steppers. Among the other exhibitors are Joseph W. Harriman, Tonzo Sauvage, Allan Pinkerton, Rufus L. Paterson, Thomas J. Feroe, Mrs. J. E. Davis, and George Watson. A new contestant will be Mrs. Howard Boocock, and Mrs. Sophie D. Gummey of Philadelphia will exhibit at Bayshore for the first time, although she is well known in horse show circles.

Competition in the harness horse classes promises to be very keen. The Watson and Harriman horses will clash in nearly every event. In many of the other classes New York society will be strongly represented. The entrants include Schuyler L. Parsons, Jr., Miss Marjorie Hubbs, Miss Margaret Whitney, Charles E. Lawrence, John T. Spratley, Charles Holloway, Joseph Larocque, Mrs. L. A. Dalrymple, R. Lawrence Smith, Mrs. H. B. Rollins, Jr., Miss Maud Kennedy, Miss Mamie Dewal, Miss Electra Havemeyer, James A. HAZEL MARTYN TRUDEAU WEDS

Chicago Woman Marries John Lavery, the Artist, in London.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 21.—Hazel Martyn Trudeau and John Lavery, the artist, were married to-day in London. The announcement of the wedding came as a distinct surprise to Mrs. Trudeau's most intimate friends in Chicago, following as it did so closely upon the death of her mother, Mrs. E. J. Martyn.

The news of the marriage came to Chicago in the shape of a cablegram from Miss Dorothy Martyn, Mrs. Trudeau's sister, who is with her, to J. Ogden Armour, making the simple statement: "Hazel will be married to-morrow to John Lavery."

John Lavery is well known as a portrait painter, and his pictures are hung in nearly every prominent gallery in Europe, and many of them have found their way to this country both for private and public collections. He is a member of the Royal Society of Artists and President of the Society of Portrait Painters of London. His acquaintance with Mrs. Trudeau antedates her previous marriage to Dr. Edward Livingston Trudeau, Jr., son of Dr. E. L. Trudeau of Saranac Lake, N. Y. Hazel Martyn, judged one of the most beautiful young women in Chicago, met John Lavery while she and her mother were spending a Summer at Concarneau, in Brittany.

She married Dr. Trudeau in December, 1903, and went to New York to live. But the young physician lived only five months after the wedding, and then the young widow returned to her mother's home in Chicago and has lived here ever since, except that she and her mother and sister have spent a good deal of time in Europe.

FOR NEW Y. M. C. A. BUILDING.

Lord Kinnaird Breaks Ground for Big Structure in London.

LONDON, July 21.—Ground was broken to-day for the $750,000 Central Young Men's Christian Association Building, which is to be erected in Tottenham Court Road as a memorial to the association's founder, Sir George Williams, by the 8,000 associations scattered throughout the world. Lord Kinnaird turned the first sod, and representatives of twenty nations followed him in the use of the spade.

The delegates to the forthcoming World's Congress of the Young Men's Christian Association, to be held in Berlin from July 28 to Aug. 2, attended to-day's ceremony in full force.

DETAINED RUSSIANS PERMITTED TO LAND

Second Board of Inquiry Reverses Order of the First One to Deport Them.

WRITS STAYED THE ACTION

New Evidence Proved That They Would Not Become Public Charges—Williams Says He Ordered Rehearing.

The four Russians, Gerschon Farber, Hersch Skuratowski, Nechemie Baitz, and Meyer Gelvot, whose deportation was stayed by writs of habeas corpus in the United States Circuit Court, were permitted to land in this country yesterday, leaving Ellis Island in the morning.

The entry into the country of these men, who had already been declared undesirables by a board of special inquiry, came after a rehearing of their case by the immigration officials, at which new evidence was introduced to prove that the men would not become public charges. On the showing made they were admitted.

The admission of these men is looked upon in many quarters as a defeat for the rulings of Commissioner Williams, and tending to show that in the future the bars against incoming aliens will not be quite as high as in the past. The officials say, however, that this view would be a misinterpretation of their action.

The cases attracted much attention because it was the first time the court had been asked to rule upon the right of the Commissioner to fix a provision that arriving aliens must have $25 each to insure their admittance, and also to pass on the legality of the Special Board of Inquiry proceedings now in vogue. It also involved the right of the officials to give their versions of cases passed up to the Washington authorities for decision.

The writs of habeas corpus were granted by Judge Hand, and it looked as though the whole matter was to be thrashed out in court, when the hearings were suddenly postponed for a week. It was said then that this was done because the immigration officials had promised that the cases would be reopened at Ellis Island.

Commissioner Williams said yesterday that twelve hours before the men had engaged counsel to fight for their right to land he had become convinced that exact justice had not been done and had personally ordered that a rehearing be granted. Before this could be done, he said, the fight before Judge Hand had begun. In giving the men a rehearing, he said, he had not been influenced by the legal fight, but had simply done what he had intended to do in the first place.

It is a matter of record, however, that Assistant Commissioner Uhl, as Acting Commissioner, had forwarded the notice of appeal to Washington with his own views on the subject.

Commissioner Williams declared that the case would have no influence in other cases. "There will be no letting down of the bars," he said.

The deportation of Mrs. Sure Hochberg and her 8-year-old child, which was to have been carried out yesterday, was stayed by an appeal. She came here to live with a brother-in-law. At the hearing of the appeal yesterday the brother-in-law and a friend of the family appeared in her behalf. The latter offered to put up a reasonable bond for the woman, but it was not accepted. The brother-in-law, however, was told that if he will prove that he is able to care for the woman and child they will be allowed to land.

There was some talk about the immigration station yesterday that a Congressional investigation of Mr. Williams's conduct of affairs at the island might be ordered. Mr. Williams smiled when told of this, and said such an investigation was not unlikely. He did not appear worried, however.

TYPHOID CASES ON FLEET.

Fourteen Men Landed—Potatoes May Have Caused the Outbreak.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., July 21.—All the typhoid fever patients of the battleship fleet, fourteen in number, were taken by the Maine to the Charlestown Navy Yard this afternoon and were placed in the naval hospital in Chelsea. The cases thus far are regarded as mild and give promise of ultimate recovery. To-morrow the Georgia, Wisconsin, and Maine, the only ships on which the disease has appeared, will be fumigated and afterward released from the quarantine regulations which have been in force.

The cause of the outbreak of typhoid is in dispute. While some attribute it to a bad lot of potatoes, others are inclined to think that the men may have contracted the disease in the Norfolk and Philadelphia Navy Yards, as the Wisconsin, Georgia, and Maine recently came from that vicinity.

A serious accident was narrowly averted in the harbor to-day, when a torpedo fired by the torpedo boat Viper struck the schooner William H. Green, the repairship of the Electric Boat Company, a glancing blow and penetrated the hull about three inches. Had the missile struck head on, the schooner would probably have sunk.

CANOEIST UPSET IN HUDSON.

Loses Outfit but Saves $1,000 in Neck-bag—Rescued by Yachtsman.

Special to The New York Times.

HASTINGS, N. Y., July 21.—N. W. Ladd of Boston, who is upward of 60 years old, was rescued from drowning in the Hudson to-night and is recuperating at the Tower Ridge Yacht Club.

He was on a canoe trip from Boston to Albany, and thence to Lake Champlain and the Thousand Islands. He came down the Sound, the East River, through the Harlem River and Ship Canal, and was making his first reach up the Hudson, when an unexpected whiff of wind from across the Palisades upset his canoe and left him struggling in the water.

His cries were heard by Nelson Brown of the Tower Ridge Yacht Club, who put off in a boat and found Mr. Ladd clinging to his overturned canoe.

Mr. Ladd lost all his camping outfit except the clothes he wore and an oiled silk bag fastened around his neck, in which was $1,000.

Mrs. Elihu Frost in Reno.

Special to The New York Times.

RENO, Nevada, July 21.—Mrs. Elihu H. Frost of New York has been in Reno visiting friends, according to her statement, for the past eight weeks. Her husband is a New York lawyer. She has her trunks packed and states that she expects to leave in a short time for a trip around the world by way of Honolulu. She has been living very quietly and unostentatiously in Reno, and at all times conducted herself along very conservative social lines, scarcely ever appearing in public. She has retained the law firm of Summerfield & Curler to represent her, she says, in the transfer of some real estate, but not to represent her in any other matter. She says that some of her friends in New York believe she is in Europe.

Mrs. Trask's "International Episode."

"The International Episode," sung at the pageant at Bath, England, referred to in Monday's cable dispatches, was written by Mrs. Spencer Trask of New York. The dispatches report that it aroused great enthusiasm. The words were written for the national air common to Great Britain and the United States. One of the stanzas follows:

All folk upon the earth
Sprang from one common birth,
Children of God.
Lord of Humanity,
Teach us Fraternity;
Peace let the Watchword be
In all the earth.

Want a furnished room, with board? See Page 13.

HAMMERSTEIN IN CHICAGO.

Impresario May Give Three Weeks of Opera in Auditorium.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 21.—Oscar Hammerstein, manager of the Manhattan Grand Opera Company, who is considering a proposition to bring his sixty artists to the Auditorium Theatre for three weeks at the beginning of the next season, arrived on the Twentieth Century Limited to-day. He inspected the Auditorium Theatre and pronounced it too big, but he did not say it would not do. He will return to New York Friday.

When asked if he were going to build a house in Chicago, a characteristic shrug of the shoulders was his answer.

"You have 2,000,000 people here and no Opera House. It is an abnormal state of affairs," he said. "You have wealth, and the people want art, but you have no leader. In time Chicago will surely have on Opera House. I have been asked many times to undertake grand opera in Chicago, but nobody has offered to spend the money. It is always 'come and build,' and never 'we are ready with the money.' There should be a man with the wealth who appreciates the art."

Mr. Hammerstein says it is at the urgent request of Klaw & Erlanger that he came to Chicago to look over the Auditorium Theatre. A short time ago he met J. Ogden Armour in Europe and talked about a home for grand opera in Chicago.

"Mme. Labia will sing in Berlin next Winter," he said. "She was not the success that was expected in this country, and after the season closed she decided that she would return to Germany."

MABEL DIXEY A BRIDE.

Actor's Sister Weds Robinson Locke, Owner of The Toledo Blade.

Miss Mabel Dixey, sister of Henry E. Dixey, the actor, and herself a former stage star, was married yesterday afternoon to Robinson Locke, owner of The Toledo Blade. The wedding was attended only by immediate relatives of the family, the ceremony being performed in the drawing room of the Dixey homestead, at 79 Mile Square Road and Bronx River Road, Sherwood Park, Yonkers.

Miss Dixey's bridesmaid was her niece, Evangeline Dixey, the daughter of the actor. Henry E. Dixey was best man. The Rev. Clarence R. Skinner, pastor of the First Universalist Church of Mount Vernon and a nephew of Otis Skinner, the actor, performed the ceremony.

Miss Dixey was leading lady for William Collier in "The Fool and His Money" and also played a leading role with Virginia Harned for some time. For two years she was the star in "Texas."

The honeymoon will be spent at Marblehead, Narragansett Pier, and after Sept. 1 the couple will be at home in the Locke homestead, Jefferson Avenue, Toledo, Ohio.

Mr. Locke is a member of the Rowsant Club of Cleveland and of the Bibliophile Society of Boston. He is the son of the late David Ross Locke, widely known as Petroleum V. Nasby.

MARIE CAHILL LOSES CASE.

Justice Bischoff Refuses Injunction in Her "Arab Love Song" Suit.

Supreme Court Justice Bischoff denied yesterday the application made a few days ago by Miss Marie Cahill, the actress, and Silvio Hein, a song writer, for an injunction restraining Charles K. Harris from publishing or using the song "I Hear a Woodpecker Knocking at My Family Tree," one of the numbers of "The Golden Girl." The plaintiffs alleged that it bore more than a faint similarity to "The Arab Love Song" composed by Silvio Hein and sung by Miss Cahill in "The Boys and Betty."

The Justice, in his decision, found that there is a practical identity of the musical theme, but that as the question is one of copyright it is a case for the Federal courts.

Going Up in a Balloon, She Says.

Maybelle Meeker, the acrobatic dancer in "The Midnight Sons," at the Broadway Theatre, says she will make an ascent in Goodale's airship at Palisade Park this afternoon, weather permitting. Moreover, as the balloon is not big enough to hold two persons, Miss Meeker says she will make the ascent alone. She also says she has had practical experience as an aeronaut, and yesterday when she visited the park she talked over the machinery of the airship with Mr. Goodale as if she knew all about it.

Goldsmith, a lawyer, as guardian ad litem to prosecute her suit.

He will not appear again in this country until the season of 1910-11.

CAPT. R. J. BEECHINOR DIES OF APOPLEXY

He Served Through the Civil War and Was Made Captain as George A. Herbert.

CONGRESS FIXED RECORDS

Allowed Him to Assume His Rank in His Own Name—He Crossed the Atlantic 168 Times.

Capt. Robert J. Beechinor, a silk importer and veteran of the civil war, died yesterday of apoplexy at the Arverne Hotel, Arverne, L. I. He was 65 years old. His home was at 325 South Second Street, Mount Vernon, N. Y., but he had been in ill-health recently and had gone to Arverne with his family for the Summer. He leaves a widow and twelve children, three daughters and nine sons.

President Lincoln issued a call for volunteers in 1862, and Capt. Beechinor enlisted in April of that year at Rochester, N. Y. At the time of his enlistment his father was lying ill at home, and to prevent any possibility of his name appearing in the reported casualty lists and thereby causing the old man's death he took the name of George A. Herbert, which he bore throughout the war.

He served in the Thirtieth United States Cavalry and rose rapidly from the ranks, being promoted to the rank of Captain on Feb. 11, 1865, immediately after the battle of Wilmington, N. C., in which he was severely wounded in an engagement with Hoke's Division.

Capt. Beechinor served throughout the war and was mustered out in December, 1865. At the last Congress proofs were furnished by many men who had known him before and after the war, and Congress allowed him to change his rank of Captain to his real name. Up to this time he had stood upon the department records as Capt. George A. Herbert.

Capt. Beechinor went into the silk importing business after he was mustered out and became a great traveler, crossing the ocean either on business or pleasure 168 times.

WELCOME G. HITCHCOCK DEAD

His Firm Failed in 1907 for $1,500,000, but He Paid Every Cent of It.

Welcome G. Hitchcock died at his home in Scarsdale last night in his 76th year. He was head of the firm of W. G. Hitchcock & Co., importing and commission merchants of 455 and 457 Broome Street, Manhattan, which failed Oct. 22, 1907, owing $1,500,000, but has since paid its creditors in full, with 5 per cent. interest. He was of English descent, and was born in Montrose, Penn. He came to New York and entered the employ of the importing house of Noel J. Becar & Co., which was established in 1818 by Pierre Becar. The house was for many years the sole agent for many of the largest manufacturing European firms. In 1884 the firm took its present name.

At the time of his failure Mr. Hitchcock owned 1,500 acres in Scarsdale and White Plains and 300 acres in New Jersey. He paid all his creditors in full, giving them 50 per cent. in cash and the remainder in bonds of the Scarsdale Estates, a corporation formed at the time to take over his realty holdings. Only a few months ago Mr. Hitchcock retired the last of the $600,000 in bonds given by him to his creditors, paying their full face value with 5 per cent. interest.

Mr. Hitchcock always declined to discuss the causes of the failure. It was a great surprise to him. On the day of the failure he went to business believing that he had more than $125,000 on deposit.

He afterward said: "I do not believe that a firm ever failed that received more kind letters from friends and creditors. The only unkind word came from a European creditor, and the books showed that we had made more than $1,000,000 in profits for him."

In the land assigned by Mr. Hitchcock to his creditors was included his home at Scarsdale, Mrs. Hitchcock voluntarily releasing her dower right to the property.

Mrs. Hitchcock survives her husband.

The funeral will be held at his late home to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. A special train will leave the Grand Central Station at 1:10 o'clock, and burial will be in Woodlawn Cemetery.

Mr. Hitchcock was President of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, Vice President of the Scarsdale Estates, and Director of the Franklin Savings Bank of New York City and of the Gramatan National Bank of Bronxville.

He was prominent in the field of scientific agriculture as an experimenter, a contributor to its literature, and a teacher. He also served on the State Board of Agriculture, later was a chemist, and later a Director of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station.

Leader in Book Advertising.

The total of book publishers' advertising in The New York Times in the first six months of 1909 was 169,944 lines—a greater volume than any other American newspaper.

In the six months ended June 30 the increase of book publishers' advertising in The New York Times over the corresponding period of last year was 45,078 lines—a greater gain by more than 10,000 lines than that of any other New York newspaper, morning or evening.

The daily circulation of The New York Times exceeds 175,000 copies. Its city sale is greater than the combined city sales of five other New York newspapers popularly ranked with The Times as to character of circulation.

The circulation of The New York Times Saturday Review of Books is greatly in excess of 175,000 copies. It is read by more of that class which buys the best books than any other publication in the world.

FATHER TYRRELL BURIED.

Catholic Rites Refused Because He Had Made No Retraction.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 21.—The remains of Father Tyrrell were buried to-day without Catholic rites, but his friend, Abbé Bremond, said prayers and blessed the grave.

The Catholic Tablet will say that in view of the adverse comment occasioned by the refusal of the Bishop of Southwark to allow the late Father Tyrrell to be buried with Catholic rites it is officially asked to state that no one of his friends in attendance at the deathbed could give the Bishop any assurance that Father Tyrrell made any retraction, either written, verbal, or by signs, during the whole of his last illness.

As the case of Father Tyrrell was specially reserved to the Holy See, retraction was necessary as a condition of Catholic burial.

BURY MRS. DAVIS-HAYES.

Ashes of Daughter of Jefferson Davis Rest in Colorado.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., July 21.—All that is mortal of Mrs. Margaret Howell Jefferson Davis-Hayes, a tiny urn of ashes, rests in the little vault in Evergreen Cemetery here. The final rites over the daughter of Jefferson Davis were simple.

The residence, overlooking the campus of Colorado College, was crowded with friends of the family. In the throng on the streets were hundreds of Southerners.

The Rev. A. C. Hedrick, assistant rector of St. Stephen's Church, officiated, assisted by the Rev. Henry Rutgers Remsen of Grace Episcopal Church. The coffin was carried from the house by young men.

All the members of the immediate family were present at the funeral. They were J. Addison Hayes, the husband; Mrs. Varina Hayes Webb, Jefferson Hayes Davis, Miss Lucy Hayes, and William Hayes, children. Dr. Gerald B. Webb, son-in-law, and the grandchildren were also present.

It is probable that the ashes will be taken to Richmond, Va., in October, and that they will be accompanied by Mr. Hayes and all of the members of his family.

WHY AMERICANS ARE EXILES.

Avoid Publicity Abroad and Can Live More Cheaply, Say Society Folk.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, July 21.—Society folk in Newport have been much interested in an article in THE NEW YORK TIMES dealing with the number of Americans who prefer to live abroad. It is admitted that the number is large, and the reasons given for their attitude among Summer residents is the publicity given to personal affairs of wealthy people in American newspapers, the cheapness of living abroad, and the more beneficial climates.

W. Hude Neilson, who has been abroad with Mr. and Mrs. John R. Drexel for the last four years, said to-day that one of the chief reasons for the liking shown for England by Americans was the fact that there was little newspaper notoriety there.

Arthur T. Kemp, who has an estate here, but has taken one in France, stated that one could live there for less than half what they can in America. The climate is delightful, the food of the best, and the pleasure and recreations innumerable.

James J. Van Alen has leased a beautiful estate in Devonshire, England, but is back in Newport for the Summer after several seasons' absence. While Mr. Van Alen will not permit of an interview it is known that publicity of his affairs in the newspapers sent him to England three years ago. Mr. Van Alen was then largely interested in Newport and its municipal affairs.

F. S. G. D. Hauteville and family, Mrs. Vanderbilt, Mrs. William B. Leeds, Mrs. Ogden Goelet, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. William Payne Thompson, Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Henry Clews, Col. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont, Mrs. Ogden Mills, and Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt are still in Europe, where they have been for some time, and who spend a portion of every year there.

Dr. Hoch to Get Ward's Island Post.

ALBANY, July 21.—The State Civil Service Commission to-day certified to the State Commission in Lunacy the name of Dr. August Hoch of the Bloomingdale Hospital at White Plains as successor to Adolph Myer, who resigned as Director of the Pathological Institute on Ward's Island. On account of the severe preliminary requirements Dr. Hoch was the only candidate who tried the examination. The place pays $6,000 a year.

GIANTS WIN LONG AND POOR GAME

HITS AS THICK AS BEES

"Rube" Marquard Again a Failure in Local Box—Fielding Ragged on Both Sides—Chicago Next.

Ball that would make Milwaukee riotous and cause even Jersey City to call out the reserves, was played on the Polo Grounds yesterday by the Giants and Cardinals. The score—whisper—was 11 to 7. New York won. St. Louis, on the other hand, lost. This last fact is published for the sole information of Roger Bresnahan, who seemed to think he could convince Bob Emslie near-runs ought to be counted for the visiting team. The former metropolitan backstop even tried to intimidate the locals by going to bat himself. He only showed that, whatever his merits as a manager, he couldn't bank on himself as a pinch hitter, for, with men on third and first and four runs needed to tie, a weak force of Charles Devlin to Shafer was the best young Roger could do. Stop! Come to think of it, he did more—he got himself benched again for checking the umpire. However, it must be admitted that Manager Bresnahan has the makings of a good team.

New York in the first round and St. Louis in the second filled the corners with none out in the same way—with a single and two walks. The results were widely different, however, for the Giants followed that step by rolling up a quartet of counts, whereas the Cardinals, though supplementing it with a third stroll, got only one run out of their opportunity. Tenney's high liner, which Hulswitt stopped with a fine jump, cracked the ice. Shafer and McCormick trudged. Fred and the Kid got in when Hulswitt's wild throw to second made Harry safe on Murray's force hit. O'Hara popped to Charles, but Devlin sacrificed Red to second, and McCormick and Murray dusted home on Bridwell's one-bagger. Myers's foul to Konetchy ended that stage of the slaughter.

Everybody thought Beebe, the St. Louis twirler, would be taken out of the box, but Bresnahan left him in until the third, whereas McGraw benched Marquard for allowing a hit and three passes in the second, thus forcing in a run for the Missourians. Doyle, batting for the Rube in that round, stripped off a triple to the Bourbon sign that would have been a homer if Larry hadn't been lame. Tenney realized it would take a two-bagger to let Larry limp in from third, so he peeled one off, and Doyle jotted.

Raymond, supplanting the southpaw, worked badly in the third. The enemy got to him for three successive safeties and a saunter. Phelps went to first on four wide ones. Konetchy fanned. Evans singled to left, brisk fielding holding Phelps on second. Delehanty drove to centre for a cushion, but Phelps was nailed at the plate on O'Hara's good throw and Myers's quick work. Evans made third on Del's hit, the batter taking second on the throw-in, and both scored when Hulswitt found a hole in left centre. Shaw ran for Hulswitt and stole second. He came in when Tenney gave Charles's grounder the go-by. Then the Entomologist took his head out of the cyanide jar and Beebe was called out on strikes.

Charles moved from second to short, Delehanty came in to cover second, and Shaw went to centre. Beebe walked O'Hara, whereupon Bresnahan sent him to the clubhouse and put Melter in. Devlin's long double to left brought O'Hara in. Arthur beat Melter's throw to third on Bridwell's roller, the batsman perching on the choice. Myers forced Bridwell. Devlin counted and the Indian made the midway on a passed ball. Raymond's hit sent the Chief to third, but Tenney fouled to Phelps and the Beetle was doubled up off first.

In the fourth, with two down, McGraw's men tallied twice on Charles's error that put Murray on first, Red's steal to second, O'Hara's jaunt, a double steal by Murray and O'Hara, Devlin's walk, and Bridwell's single. A second double steal was made by Devlin and Bridwell, but Schlei, who had taken Myers's place in the first half of that inning, fanned. Singles by Raymond, Tenney, and Murray, interwoven with a fly-out and a force hit, gave the Giants their tenth run in the fifth. In the seventh, with Beckman pitching, the visitors registered twice on hits by Bliss, Konetchy, and Evans, Delehanty's sacrifice fly, and Shaw's one-sacker. New York recorded in the same round for the eleventh time on Tenney's trot, Shafer's force hit, McCormick's rap, Charles's wild throw to third on Murray's grasser, and O'Hara's out at first.

The game's last run was made by St. Louis in the eighth on strolls by Ellis and Konetchy, and hits by Evans and Delehanty. Murray's good catch of Shaw's near-leaguer retired the visitors when the bases were full. The score:

Chicago's Victory Was a Gift.

Instead of the Chicagos winning by 3 to 2 the Cubs should have been shut out and the Brooklyns entitled to their brace of runs in the fifth and last game of the series between the two teams at Washington Park yesterday. The playing of Jordan and Alperman was wretched, and their bad influence even exerted itself on that clever little short stop, McMillan, who missed the easiest kind of a fly in the ninth inning. Twenty-five hundred persons saw the game. The score:

It was such a fine big apple we cut yesterday, that there are lots more good bites and something to every taste.

The general revision of prices on men's suits made $15 and $20 the popular prices.

Here's what did it.

$15.

$20.

Of course there are not so many to-day, but still there are sizes aplenty.

Not to speak of extra values at other prices.

We've just done something more for youths, sizes 32 to 35 chest.

Marked down all their "Vestless" suits to $12, $14 and $16.

Since all the youths' regular mixture suits are now at $15, $18 and $20, it's economical to be slim.

Even the boys in short trousers get in on the clothing bargains.

With all boys' Norfolk and double breasted suits reduced to $6.50, $8.50, $10.50 and $12.50.

YANKEES COULD NOT HIT TIGER PITCHER

Eddie Summers Shut Them Out, While Hughes Was Easy for Detroit.

LAPORTE SPIKED BY BUSH

New York Second Baseman Will Be Out of Game Several Days—Keeler's Clever Fielding.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., July 21.—Eddie Summers was as good to-day as he was in his eighteen-inning shutout of last Friday, and the Yankees never once looked dangerous, not even when Keeler got as far as third base in the second inning. He got on on a fumble by Killifer, opening the inning. But the following three batsmen grounded to Bush, Keeler advancing a station on the first two outs. Detroit won, 2 to 0.

On the other side Hughes was hit freely throughout. He was much easier than the score indicates, wise and brilliant fielding saving him many a mark in the base-hit column. Of the wise fielding a bit by Keeler in the fifth inning was most notable. Ty Cobb had been slamming the ball around recklessly every time he came to bat, and this time Keeler took a hunch and stationed himself deep in right field. Then Ty hit the ball about as far as he ever did in his life, and Wee Willie was right there to catch it. With Keeler playing even a few yards further in it would have been a sure homer. Keeler also figured in the brilliant brand of fielding, coming into the corner of the grandstand and taking a foul fly from McIntyre in the seventh.

Demmitt and Hemphill made fancy running catches, and Elberfeld put up another star game at short. Laporte was missed at second, Knight being good, but not displaying the brilliant defensive work Laporte has shown here. Laporte's retirement is due to Bush's spikes and will last several days.

The runs made off Hughes came through irresistible offensive work. Bush scored the first one, hitting safe with one gone in the third, stealing second, this being the incident that put Laporte out of the game, and tallying on Crawford's single to left. Cobb also singled, but was out at second on an exceedingly questionable decision. He tried for an additional base when the ball was thrown to Austin in an ineffectual attempt to nail Crawford.

The second run was made by Killifer's homer. This young man appeared at second base because Schaefer's work has been off color for the last few days. His homer went to far centre field. The score:

Important New Baseball Rule.

CINCINNATI, July 21.—An official order defining the ground rules relating to overthrown balls was issued to-day by President Harry Pulliam of the National Baseball League, before starting for New York. President Pulliam has sent the order to all club Presidents and managers, giving notice of the change, which is the outgrowth of a protested game played between Brooklyn and Pittsburg. The new order says:

"Owing to confusion that has resulted as to application of ground rules, the following instructions to umpires will be in force on and after this date:

"When a thrown ball goes into a stand for spectators, or over or through any fence, or into the players' bench (whether the ball stays in or comes out) the runner shall be entitled to two bases. The umpire, in awarding these bases, is to be governed by the position of the runner or runners when the throw is made.

"With spectators on the field, if the umpire determines that runners shall be entitled to two bases on a ball thrown into the crowd, the position of such runners on the bases shall be reckoned from where they were at the time the ball was thrown. This being a matter of judgment, the umpire is the sole judge."

Mathewson's Finger Only Mashed.

An X-ray examination of the second finger of Pitcher Mathewson of the Giants, which was injured Tuesday by a liner off the bat of Outfielder Delehanty of the St. Louis Club, showed that the finger was mashed, not broken, as was first supposed. Mathewson will, according to the surgeons, be able to pitch again by the end of next week.

Coakley to Pitch for Manhattans.

Coakley since assuming the management of the Manhattans, has not lost a game, and in his last two contests has struck out thirty-three men.

Kling Would Not Play for Murphy.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 21.—"I will quit baseball rather than return to Chicago and play for Murphy," said Johnny Kling, the champion catcher, here to-day. "I am through with Murphy and his Chicago club. I will play with any other club that meets my terms, however, but never with Chicago."

WESTINGHOUSE CO. DEFICIT.

Manufacturing Profits of $650,784—Interest and Other Charges $2,200,771.

The annual report of the Westinghouse Electrical Manufacturing Company shows a deficit of $918,683 for the year ended March 31. Gross earnings were $20,606,592, and net manufacturing profits $650,784.

Total income amounted to $1,966,259, but the deduction of $2,200,771 for bond and other interest, and depreciation and miscellaneous charges amounting to $694,160 accounted for the deficit. The gross surplus at the end of the year was $11,187,786, which, after the payment of receiver's expenses, adjustment of debt, and other charges, including reserve for losses, left a surplus on March 31 of $8,980,334.

President George Westinghouse in his report explains the loss and surplus as follows:

> The loss during the fiscal year of $918,682.91, after providing for interest on the debt and all expenses, is chiefly accounted for by a small volume of business, the utilization of high-priced material, by sales at reduced prices, and by very considerable extra expenses incurred in completing the departmentalizing of the manufacturing operations of the company and in the rearranging of the machinery, which work was carried on without interruption by the receivers.
>
> The results of these important changes in manufacturing methods have been to greatly reduce the amount of material, raw, in process and finished, required to be kept in stock for a given amount of output, (as will be noted in the balance sheet, the amount of material in stock, work in progress, goods on consignment, and apparatus with customers, on March 31, 1909, was $9,961,182.52, as compared with $17,740,178.32 on Oct. 23, 1907, when the receivers were appointed,) and also to greatly increase the space available for manufacturing operations.
>
> The officials estimate that the plants of the company have an annual output capacity of $50,000,000, and that the cash capital provided is ample for conducting a business of that magnitude.
>
> While there has been a decided improvement in the business of the company since the beginning of the year, it has not yet nearly reached normal proportions, although the outlook and inquiries indicate that in the near future the full capacity of the various works will be required to meet the demand.

Ketchel Hurt in Auto Accident.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 21.—Stanley Ketchel, the champion middleweight pugilist, was painfully injured yesterday by being thrown violently against the front of the automobile in which he was riding when the machine collided with a wagon. It was feared at first that his arm had been broken, but later developments showed only a severe strain. In shielding his face from the glass front Ketchel badly lacerated his hands.

New Motor Cycle Stadium.

It is expected that new world's records for motor cycle races will be established at the opening of the new stadium at Springfield, Mass., on Saturday. Not only will the fastest riders in the country compete, but the track will offer special advantages for clipping old marks. The stadium has been laid out for motor cycles exclusively, and is the only track of this kind in the country. It is three laps to the mile. Jack Prince, the former bicycle rider and now a track builder, constructed the track, which is a complete circle.

NO UNLISTED STOCKS AFTER NEXT APRIL

Exchange Abolishes the Department, as Recommended by Hughes Committee.

TIME FOR ADJUSTMENT

But No More Admissions Hereafter—Such Stocks May Apply for Admission to Regular List.

The unlisted department of the New York Stock Exchange, which has been the refuge for many companies showing a diffidence about publishing annual statements of their financial condition, was abolished yesterday by an announcement issued by the Stock Exchange authorities to take effect on April 1, 1910.

This department, which up to a year ago included a large number of the important industrial and mining corporations whose securities are quoted on the Exchange, has been narrowed in the past year to a very few corporations. It was condemned in the report of the White Wall Street Investigating Committee made last month to Gov. Hughes, and its abolition has been expected by Wall Street for some time.

On June 23 the Governing Committee of the Stock Exchange appointed a committee of five, consisting of Ernest Groesbeck, W. W. Heaton, James B. Mabon, C. M. Newcombe, and H. K. Pomroy, to consider and report upon the subject of dealings in the unlisted department. At a meeting of the committee held yesterday the report of the committee was read, and the following recommendations were adopted:

> That the constitution of the Exchange be amended to provide that hereafter there will be but one Listing Committee, viz.: The Committee on Stock List, to which all applications must be made; that the Committee on Unlisted Securities shall cease to exist on April 1, 1910, (no admissions of securities to the unlisted department to be made hereafter,) and that the Secretary of the Exchange be instructed to notify the officers of all corporations or companies whose securities are now dealt in in the unlisted department that if said securities are not admitted to the regular list before April 1, 1910, (after due application,) no further dealings in said securities will be had in the Exchange thereafter.

The existence of the unlisted department is continued until the date mentioned in order that the corporations or companies whose securities are now dealt in in the department may have ample time to prepare their applications for admission to the regular list.

During the last year most of the important companies which theretofore had been included in the unlisted department have been admitted to the regular stock list.

The Amalgamated Copper Company is one of the most important active stocks at present quoted in the unlisted department. This company has for two years been issuing annual reports which comply with the requirements of the Stock Exchange, and there is little doubt that its shares will be admitted to the regular listing department before the appointed time expires. Other securities affected are Anaconda, National Biscuit preferred, Tennessee Copper, Utah Copper, American Woolen, and American Smelters preferred.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Foreign Souvenir Postal Cards Are Denied Entry as "Lithographic Prints."

Post cards imported by the Souvenir Post Card Company of New York were held yesterday by the Board of United States General Appraisers to be dutiable as assessed by Collector Loeb at 25 per cent. under the provision in the tariff for "printed matter."

It was alleged by the importing concern that the Collector had erred in classifying the cards, and that they should have been admitted to entry at appropriate specific rates under Paragraph 400 covering lithographic prints. General Appraiser Fischer, in his decision for the board, says that the customs tribunal is convinced that the cards are not lithographed, and consequently the assessment imposed by the Collector will stand.

The board refused to reverse the Collector's assessment on braids composed of cotton and rubber, with the result that they will be obliged to stand duty at the rate of 60 per cent. instead of only 30 per cent., as claimed by Mills & Gibb and others. The board also overruled protests filed by Guthman Solomons & Co. regarding the classification of metal thread goods, and that filed by Massce & Co. dealing with trimmings and galloons.

SYRIAN FIRMS IN TROUBLE.

Bankruptcy Petitions Filed Against Big Dry Goods and Notions Houses.

Petitions in bankruptcy were filed yesterday against two well-known firms in the Syrian quarter, Michael, Korkemas & Co., wholesale dealers in dry goods, notions, and jewelry at 34 to 40 West Street, and Elias & M. Aboussleman, wholesale dealers in notions at 74 Greenwich Street, by Myers & Goldsmith.

The creditors in the case of Michael, Korkemas & Co. are the H. B. Claflin Company, $836; London & Hyman, $347, and David Schiff & Co., $41, and in the case of Elias & M. Aboussleman the creditors are the H. B. Claflin Company, $540; London & Hyman, $479, and Isaac Silverstein, $229. Insolvency and preferential payments are alleged is each case.

The partners in Michael, Korkemas & Co. are Marron Michael, Anton Michael, Richard Korkemas, and Assef Ganen. The firm is a consolidation, on June 1 last, of Richard Korkemas & Co., who had been in business since 1897, and of M. & A. Michael, who had been in business since 1900. A short time after consolidation they claimed to be worth $120,000.

Myers & Goldsmith said they had been slow in meeting their bills, and yesterday creditors found a City Marshal in the place. Stern, Singer & Barr, attorneys for the firm, said that the liabilities are $68,000 and the assets are nominally $130,000.

The firm is solvent, and according to their books has a substantial surplus. The trouble is due to assisting friends by indorsements, on which the parties accommodated were unable to meet their obligations.

Elias & M. Aboussleman is composed of Elias and Michael Aboussleman, who have been in business here for twenty years. Stern, Singer & Barr, their attorneys, said that the trouble was due to inability to collect outstanding accounts and meet current bills. The liabilities are $33,000 and the assets are nominally $35,000. They expect to effect an adjustment with their creditors.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

Business Brisk in All Lines—Prices May Go Higher.

Commenting on the situation of the iron and steel trade The Iron Age says:

> The pig iron markets are strong throughout the whole country, but it has been chiefly in the East that there has been activity. Steelmakers in Eastern Pennsylvania have been purchasing additional quantities. Four of the plants took in all 44,000 tons for prompt delivery.
>
> Steel billets are higher in all the markets, and a fair amount of business has been done. A shortage has developed in the Chicago district, but relief is expected next month through the starting of the Gary mill.
>
> The situation at the Bessemer plant at South Chicago is such that new orders for Bessemer rails must go to Edgar Thomson for the present, thus putting work into that rail mill, which has been running only at a 35 per cent. gait for a long time. Some steel rail business is pending in the West, the Atchison, among other roads, having come in for additional tonnage. Of the Boston & Maine order 10,000 tons has been placed with the Pennsylvania Steel Company. A like amount will probably be placed in the near future. The New Haven Road has made arrangements for the rerolling of an additional lot of 15,000 tons of old rails during this year.
>
> The greater activity in placing car orders is giving much encouragement to the plate and structural mills. A fair amount of tonnage is coming out in other directions.
>
> The leading interests will probably announce an advance of prices in finished products early next week.

The Iron Trade Review says:

> Labor troubles continue to form the only dark cloud in an otherwise clear sky of prosperity. The fight against the open-shop policy of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company is being carried on with determination. The company has obtained non-union workmen for some of its plants, and its operations are at about 40 per cent. of total capacity in the tin plate plants and at more than 70 per cent. of its sheet capacity. Most of the independent companies have signed the Amalgamated scale and are operating in full. The sheet business of the principal producer during the last forty-five days has been equal to the full capacity of its active mills. The total orders in finished lines of one of the leading independent interests so far this month show an increase of 150 per cent. over the full month of July, 1908.
>
> Increased activity of the railroads is one of the most cheerful signs of the times. The American Locomotive Company has made a purchase of heavy machine tools, probably involving $500,000, the largest contract since the depression started in 1907. During the last month the Lake Shore Railroad placed over 300 idle locomotives in active service. Equipment orders include 2,000 cars for the Chicago & Northwestern to the American Car and Foundry Company and 60 locomotives for three railroads to the American Locomotive Company.
>
> The Steel Corporation, eliminating the Tennessee Company, is now operating about 92½ per cent. of its entire blast furnace capacity, which is equivalent to 107 per cent. of that available during the height of the 1906 activity, and stocks are still at an absolute minimum.

Second Avenue R. R. Reorganization.

Stockholders of the Second Avenue Railroad met yesterday and appointed a Bondholders' Committee comprised of J. W. Castles, President of the Union Trust Company; A. J. Hemphill, Secretary of the Guaranty Trust Company; George Amer, Henry S. Redmond, and George G. Amer, Jr. Most of the stockholders are said to have acquiesced in the plan for an assessment payment to free the road from its present financial difficulties. The committee will supervise a scheme of reorganization.

SELLING OF STEEL SHARES

Question of Dividend Advance Uppermost—Wheat Breaks Again on Good Weather—More Gold for Argentina.

Having advanced steadily for six days, the stock market reacted yesterday, but Wall Street, overlooking the obvious explanation of the moderate recession in prices, felt it necessary to seek reasons in out-of-the-way places. An early favorite in this respect was the news from Washington of disagreement among the conferrees on the Tariff bill, but later in the day heavy selling of Steel shares and subsequent declines in their price replaced the Washington news. For some little time speculative buying of Steel stocks has been going forward on the theory that at the meeting of the Directors of the Corporation on July 27 an advance in the common stock dividend would be declared. It was reasoned by the professional traders who participated in this buying that, on the eve of the dividend meeting there would at least be talk enough of a dividend increase, particularly with conditions so cheerful in the steel trade, to promote a rise in the price of the stock which would provide profits on purchases just as effectively as an actual dividend increase. For several days past these speculators have obviously been closing out their lines at the profits anticipated, and have, perhaps, in addition, sold stocks short. Whatever the public at large may think of the Directorate of the Steel Corporation, those best acquainted with its make-up—and this includes the professional traders mentioned—know that it is above all things conservative, and that, while the corporation's earnings at present and its prospects for the future fully justify a dividend increase, yet with the Tariff bill still unsettled and a degree of uncertainty regarding the crops still existing, the chances are at least against any enlargement in the present rate on Steel common. Incidentally, it may be said that it has been apparent for many months that the extraordinary buying of Steel shares has not been of the character which anticipates merely one dividend declaration. That sort of buying has been left to the professionals whose talk has raised what are perhaps unjustifiable expectations of an advance in the rate to be declared next week. Far more interesting than speculative hopes and disappointments as expressed in the movement of securities yesterday was the fall of nearly 2 cents a bushel in various wheat options on the Chicago Board of Trade. It really looks as if the wonderfully favorable conditions in the crop country were at last beginning to tell upon the grain markets. They have already enheartened railroad executives and the heads of great industrial corporations everywhere, as the continued expansion in the demand for supplies and materials of all kinds proves. Of interest also was the further advance in the price of copper metal on the local Metal Exchange yesterday, making a second movement of the kind within two days and suggesting recovery of the trade from the reaction which has covered nearly two months.

Several additional engagements of gold for export to Argentina were reported during the day, and the foreign exchange market moved in such fashion as to suggest still further shipments. Local money market conditions were unchanged. The banks have made up their earlier loss to the Sub-Treasury on routine transactions and promise to come out better in this respect this week than they did last.

THE COTTON MARKET.

Weak and Active on Rain Prospects—Closes 26 to 31 Points Lower.

Cotton had a severe break yesterday, following official predictions for rains in Texas. The close was feverish at a net decline of 26@31 points, and trading was extremely active from start to finish.

The market opened firm at an advance of 7@13 points in response to firm cables and over-night buying orders. Almost at once it weakened. Offerings became very heavy again in the afternoon, and the low point was reached in the late trading. Reports that the wind had shifted and was blowing a Galveston storm out to the Gulf so that the expected rains might not materialize in the interior preceded a rally in the last few minutes.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Break in Chicago Subway Has Little Effect on General Market on the Curb.

COPPER SHARES SELL OFF

Many Active Issues Close at Fractional Declines After Sluggish Trading—Bond List Inactive but Strong.

One of the features of the curb market yesterday was the break in Chicago Subway, which dropped from 19 to 16½ on transactions of 2,300 shares. The copper market was sluggish, although many of the active issues showed some strength. Cumberland-Ely was one of the exceptions, along with Davis-Daly copper, both losing 1-16. Trading in the bond list was restricted to a few issues, which closed even with opening prices.

⁂

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Attractive to Speculators.

There was variety enough in the market yesterday between new high record prices and sharp breaks to stimulate speculative curiosity if not speculative activity. Union Pacific sold at a new high figure, and in the afternoon took a quick tumble that gave hope to those who have been expecting that at some time or other a sharp reaction would take place. When analyzed, the break in Union Pacific did not suffice to lay any particularly firm foundation in optimism for those who have been fearful and hopeful. A setback of a point or two in such a stock as Union Pacific may happen at any moment and be without the slightest general significance. The early activity in the market was not maintained, nor was it expected that it would be. Most of the brokers sent word that there appeared to be some kind of an artificial stimulus in the earlier trading, and that a quieter market might be looked for. This was verified subsequently. New speculation, if it may be so described, is not being developed. The trader who is long of a few hundred shares of stock is satisfied to watch and wait for his eventual profit, content to limit his day-to-day speculations to a very limited amount.

⁂

Price and Yield.

Brokers have to answer many queries in these days concerning the Steel stocks, and inevitably as to whether the dividend will be increased or not. It is interesting to note that in probably a majority of the cases in which advice is given there is expressed the conviction that earnings and prospects justify an increase, although tariff and crop uncertainties may delay it. On the other hand, the essential qualification is made that Steel common paying 4 per cent. and selling above 70 would appear to be fairly high for an industrial. It must be noted also that while this suggestion is thrown out, the point is not made that Steel common may not go higher, the obvious distinction being offered between a theory and a possibility. The broker who thinks that Steel common paying 4 per cent. and selling at 72 is too high, does not say that the stock is not likely to sell higher, nor does he encourage the theory that short selling ought to be indulged in on a possible adjustment of price to investment yield.

Theories of Distribution.

Pessimistic analysts of the market are now proposing the speculative theory that this market is being held at present prices and that it is likely to be advanced for the purpose of distributing stock. Possibly that is right. There is something familiar, however, about such a suggestion, and the trader bullishly inclined will be quite willing to be skeptical on such a point. He will content himself with remarking that these theories are part and parcel of a bearish attitude toward the market. He is just as likely to be right as not, and the basis of his hope for higher prices is just as good as that of the suggestion of impending distribution, both being based only on conjecture. One theory of the market at present is that there is not a large public participation, many outsiders having sold their stocks and taken their profits, that the market is professional, but that big interests are heavy holders of securities. If that theory of the market is correct, it will require the development of a liberal amount of enthusiasm before the point of distribution can be reached, and therefore the so-called big interests are not going to throw stocks around indiscriminately, making a market among themselves for their own wares. Nevertheless, the distribution theory as an impending event is being circulated.

Corn and Cotton.

Some crop experts appear to be more conservative in their views concerning the harvest yield than they were a short time ago. There is apparently a difference of opinion with regard to the wheat yield, but no one seems to think that any decrease in the wheat crop will have any influence on the market. It is accepted generally that the corn crop will be a bumper, but the point is made that for the purpose of increasing the general resources of the country the corn crop does not figure to a very large extent. One expert in these matters said yesterday that so far as corn is concerned it is a question of swapping dollars, there being so little exported which would bring in foreign money. The farmer gains, but at the expense of some one else in his own community. On the other hand, a bumper crop of cotton means heavy exports and the piling up of international credit. Still, it would appear as if the corn crop had a greater speculative influence than the cotton crop.

Watching the Industrials.

Speculative curiosity concerning the industrials is manifest to many brokers. They report queries by customers, made either personally or by letter, usually concerning dividend prospects. There are hypothetical questions as to what is likely to happen if good times be maintained, earnings of this or that company increased, and the dividend probably advanced. The wise broker tells this kind of a questioner that with good times, good earnings, and increased dividends, any stock is likely to advance. That is a kind of canned wisdom which does not cost much effort and which possibly satisfies the inquirer just as much as an elaborate and less logical explanation. This market has been more or less distinctively divided into an industrial and rail market, each section having its own following; and the exploitation and manipulation with one or two exceptions being in the railroad stocks.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

American Securities Close Easy on the London Exchange.

LONDON, July 21.—The supply of money considerably exceeded the demand on the market to-day, and discounts were easy in sympathy.

The Stock Exchange passed a quiet session, the public still holding off. The tone, however, was good. Home rails hardened on satisfactory dividends. Gilt-edged securities were maintained on cheap money, and foreign shares and Kaffirs benefited by Paris buying.

American securities opened steady and later improved on good support. At noon the market was steady, with prices from ⅛ to ¾ higher than yesterday's New York closing. This was the brightest section, and the advance was maintained until the receipt of the Wall Street opening, when irregularity set in and United States Steel and Southern Pacific weakened sharply. Union Pacific was maintained, but the market finished easy.

Bar silver dull, 23½d per ounce.

Money, ½@¾ per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 1¼ per cent., for three months' bills 1 5-16@1⅜ per cent.

PARIS, July 21.—On the Bourse to-day rentes were favorably influenced by the fall of the Clemenceau Ministry. The rest of the list was firm.

Three per cent. rentes, 97f 5c for the account.

Exchange on London, 25f 19c for checks.

BERLIN, July 21.—Prices on the Boerse to-day were firm.

CHICAGO, July 21.—Quaker Oats was the feature of the early local market, advancing from 137 to 140. Canal and Dock, Boxboard, and Sears advanced fractionally, and Subway broke 4½ points, to 16, before midday. But the selling subsided at that price. Series One, Chicago Railways certificates, reflect favorable dividend action about Aug. 1. It is expected that this issue will get an 8 per cent. disbursement at that time, covering the year. While there were no transactions in Chicago Railways Series One certificates to-day the price held firm at 115. Sears-Roebuck preferred showed a 2½ point rise on the day's trading, and Subway recovered to 17. Sales on the Chicago Stock Exchange to-day were:

Steel Trust Prices Not Yet Advanced.

President William E. Corey of the United States Steel Corporation presided at yesterday's regular monthly meeting of the operating officials of the corporation in the absence of Chairman Elbert H. Gary, who sailed for Europe last week. Although it was generally understood that the advanced prices for standard steel products recently announced by the independent companies would be met by the trust, no statement was issued after yesterday's meeting.

VIRGINIA-CAROLINA PROFITS.

Chemical Company's Net Earnings for the Year $3,538,593; Sales, $44,942,227.

The annual report of the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company, issued yesterday at the annual meeting of stockholders, shows net profits of the company and subsidiaries for the year amounting to $3,538,593, after the deduction of $1,073,701 for repairs and maintenance.

President Morgan, in his report, stated that the current assets exceed the liabilities by $19,883,305, and he pointed out that during the year $44,507 had been added to the capital assets. The total sales of the company and its subsidiaries exceeded last year's by $5,144,287, amounting to $44,942,227.

President Morgan explained that the net earnings of $3,538,593 were not commensurate with the volume of business done, owing to the bad state of the fertilizer trade in the past season. He continued:

"Since our last report your company has successfully issued and floated $12,000,000 5 per cent. first mortgage collateral trust bonds, from the proceeds of which it has retired the $5,000,000 of collateral trust bonds then outstanding, the remainder of the net proceeds of the bonds having been added to the working capital of the company. The issue puts the company in a strong financial position, and has enabled it to materially increase its business.

"Taken as a whole the last year has been possibly the most trying one that we have had in the fertilizer department of the business, and it has required constant and efficient endeavors from your officials and employes to get anything like satisfactory results from this branch of the businesss."

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, July 21.—More activity was noticeable in the Boston market to-day, and commission houses reported an increased inquiry. Trading was well distributed, both the copper shares and the local industrials coming in for a good share of attention. Giroux, Lake, North Lake, North Butte, and United States Smelting were the features among the mining issues, while American Telephone and Boston Suburban were features in the local miscellaneous list.

The undertone continued steady to strong until the latter part of the afternoon, when profit taking resulted in a fractional setback all around. The market closed steady at the decline. The complete list of transactions follows:

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, July 21.—The first hour in the local market gave promise of more activity than a week past, but when sentiment in Wall Street weakened it had a depressing effect here, and trading dropped off. Electric Storage Battery was the feature during the forenoon, going to 57 on the report that the company had booked one of the largest orders in its history.

Fairly heavy buying of Lehigh Valley, which carried prices up a full point, occurred at the same time, and "tips" were circulated all around that a sharp advance was to come in all coal road stocks.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT.—A violent break and a weak close at the lowest point resulted from the crop outlook and denials of rust in the Northwest yesterday. Temperatures there were moderated somewhat by heavy rains, while through the Winter wheat belt clear weather gave every incentive for active farm work. The total interior movement was 702,000 bushels, compared with 1,210,000 bushels a year ago. Changes in foreign markets were slight and unimportant. Larger offerings were reported from Russia, where crop conditions are exceedingly favorable. Export sales amounted to 60 loads, mainly outports. Cash wheat in New York closed $1.42 nominal for old No. 2 red in elevator and free on board afloat; new No. 2 red, $1.20½ free on board afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, $1.41⅞, and No. 2 hard Winter, [illegible] free on board afloat.

CORN.—Prices held very firm up to the last hour yesterday, when support was withdrawn after the break in wheat, a severe drop closing the day. The decline was helped by reports of exceedingly favorable conditions through the belt and somewhat larger receipts. Exporters took 12 loads, and cash corn in New York closed 78¼c for No. 2 in elevator, with sales at 78c free on board afloat; new corn, 64½c free on board afloat, Winter shipment.

Braden Copper Mines Co.

SIX PER CENT TEN YEAR CONVERTIBLE GOLD BONDS

Convertible into stock ($5 per share) at par

DATED JUNE 1, 1909. DUE JUNE 1919.

Secured by a Collateral Trust Mortgage on all of the First Mortgage Bonds and Capital Stock of the Braden Copper Co.

Interest payable June 1 and December 1, in New York City.

Trustee, FARMERS' LOAN & TRUST COMPANY, New York.

Denomination $500 Each. Either Coupon or Registered.

The issue may be redeemed or purchased at the option of the Company in whole or in part within ten years from June 1st, 1909, at 105 and accrued interest, out of a sinking fund derived from a stipulated percentage of the ore mined; the bondholders to have the privilege of converting before the redemption date any bonds that may be called.

These bonds are secured by all the property of the Braden Copper Company, consisting of approximately 1,200 acres of mineralized lands in Chili, South America, containing extensive copper mines, of milling and smelting plants and a railway 43½ miles in length, together with its equipment, tramways, terminal lands, water rights, townsites, stores, etc.

Based on a daily tonnage of 2,000 tons, as is now contemplated, the cost of producing refined copper delivered in London or New York should not exceed 8 cents per pound. The net profits per year on a basis of 13 cents copper with a plant treating 2,000 tons per day, are estimated at $1,177,000. Every cent rise in the price of copper metal will increase the net earnings $235,000 per annum.

The proceedings for the creation of this issue of bonds and of the stock and bonds of the Braden Copper Company pledged by the collateral trust indenture were taken by Messrs. Kendall & Herzog, representing the Company, and approved by Messrs. Guggenheimer, Untermyer & Marshall and Messrs. Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett, representing the syndicate managers.

Of these $4,000,000 bonds:

$375,000	are held in the Company's Treasury.
500,000	have been exchanged for Braden Copper Company debenture bonds.
625,000	have been exchanged for Braden Copper Company preferred shares.
2,500,000	have been disposed of by the Company, the proceeds to be used for the construction of a new mill and for equipment and development.

The par value of the new bonds issued in exchange for the old debenture bonds and preferred stock of the Braden Copper Company is less than the actual cash heretofore expended by that Company.

Having sold a large portion of the above Bonds, we offer the balance at 101½ and accrued interest.

Applications for bonds should be accompanied by 5% of the amount subscribed for. Subscriptions will be closed on Friday, July 23, at 3 o'clock P. M., the right being reserved to reject any applications and to award a smaller amount than applied for and to close subscriptions before that date.

Allotments made upon subscriptions are to be paid at the office of the undersigned on August 2nd, 1909, with interest accrued until that date.

These bonds have been underwritten by responsible parties.

Subscription blanks, together with prospectus containing details concerning the Braden Copper Mines Company, may be had at the office of the undersigned.

"As Good as a Corbin House."
JOHN R. CORBIN Co HOUSES
THE ACME OF QUALITY—
THE STANDARD OF COMPARISON.

Builders and brokers who have examined the "Corbin Houses" realize they are unequaled, and cannot be duplicated at their price; and, in their zealous efforts to sell other and inferior houses, by endeavoring to raise them, by comparison, to that high standard of construction occupied by the "Corbin House," involuntarily admit their superiority; for who would select anything but the VERY BEST as an object of comparison?

Why Are They The BEST?—Why Are They Selected As The MEDIUM OF COMPARISON?

Because—Architecturally and mechanically PERFECT, faultless in interior arrangement and decoration, and built for comfort and health;

Because—Constructed under the Direct Supervision of the Superintendent of each of our various departments, who are the BEST MECHANICS obtainable in their particular branches;

Because—Built by Standardized Construction, of the BEST MATERIAL, purchased in enormous quantities at WHOLESALE PRICES, saves the purchaser from 20% to 25%.

Because—The Mortise and Tenon method, which is used throughout, insures RIGID CONSTRUCTION, thereby reducing the cost for repairs in after years to a MINIMUM.

Our Reference:—OWNERS of "Corbin Houses."
Our Motto:—TRUE REPRESENTATION.
Our Goal:—PROGRESS and PERFECTION.
We Have Convinced Others, And Can Convince YOU.

DAYLIGHT BURGLAR HELD UP BY CITIZEN

Quitting Prof. Kingsbury's Elmhurst Home Mr. Gregg's Pistol Stopped Him.

WHOLE VILLAGE UP IN ARMS

Queens ex-District Attorney Kept Revolver in Robber's Face Till the Police Arrived.

Armed with a heavy revolver, former District Attorney George A. Gregg of Queens County, who assisted in the prosecution of Capt. Peter C. Hains, Jr., for the murder of William E. Annis, and backed by Theodore Groh, an attache of District Attorney De Witt's office, and half the population of the fashionable section of Elmhurst, L. I., yesterday morning captured a burglar who was making a leisurely daylight raid in the home of Prof. George H. Kingsbury, who, with his family, are spending their vacation at Winton, N. Y.

The capture was purely a civilian affair, as the police did not appear on the scene until the burglar, surrounded by excited villagers and subdued by Mr. Gregg's heavy artillery, had all the fight taken out of him.

"Won't you point that thing the other way?" asked the captive, anxiously, as he sat waiting the arrival of the police, who had received telephone messages from all points within a radius of five blocks of the burglar zone.

Mr. Gregg said he would not, at the same time explaining to his captive that the weapon had a hair trigger, and he always had it pointed toward a fixed point in case it should go off by accident.

The captive wiped the perspiration from his forehead at this, and prayed silently that the police might not tarry on the way.

Prof. Kingsbury, who is instructor in English in the Elmhurst High School, lives in Lamont Avenue, one door from the corner of Fifth Street. At about 8 o'clock yesterday morning George E. Walters, son of a neighbor, saw a well-dressed, stocky man carrying two big dress-suit cases, who made several trips through the streets in the vicinity, each time scanning the Kingsbury home.

Young Walters notified Wilfred C. Nott, who has charge of the fire horses in that vicinity, and together the two reported the situation to persons in Spaeth's drug store, on the corner. In the meantime the news that a suspicious character was loose in the neighborhood had spread. A view of the Kingsbury house can be had from the drug store, and suddenly the watchers saw the curtains of a bay window in the house pulled aside, while a face peered out.

"There he is!" shouted the watchers, dashing out of the drug store. At the corner they met Mr. Gregg, who inquired what the trouble was.

"Burglars!" yelled the crowd.

Mr. Gregg went into his home, near by, and got his 44-calibre revolver just as the stranger came tripping down the front steps of the Kingsbury house. He weighed about 200 pounds and looked as if he might make it interesting for any one who attempted to tackle him single-handed. Fireman Nott tackled him first, and wanted to know what he had been doing in the house.

"Out of my way," said the stranger, shoving Nott aside.

Just then Mr. Gregg appeared, and, catching the fleeing stranger by the lapel of the coat, thrust his revolver in his face.

"It's all right," expostulated the stranger, ducking to get out of range. "Take that gun out of my face."

"You move and I'll blow the top of your head off," said Gregg. The crowd cheered this, and a dozen persons dashed for telephones to notify the police.

Later, in custody of Detective Enright and followed by a big procession of villagers, the stranger was marched to the Newtown Police Station, where he described himself as George Schmidt, a cook, living at 45 Wyckoff Avenue, Ridgewood. He was arraigned before Magistrate Connolly, in the Flushing Court and held in $5,000 bail on a charge of burglary.

The police made an inspection of the Kingsbury home, and found indications that the place had been entered some time ago and that thieves had been carrying off portable articles piecemeal.

The suit cases the burglar was seen carrying were found in the house, packed with loot, while the rugs had been rolled up and tied, ready to carry away. It is thought the thief had confederates, and that the gang intended cleaning out the place at night and carting the loot away in a wagon.

The prisoner denied that he had been in the house.

EMMA GOLDMAN TO TALK HERE

Commissioner Baker, She Says, Will Allow Her to Lecture in Harlem.

Assured by Commissioner Baker, she says, that she will not be interfered with, Emma Goldman will speak to-morrow night at the Harlem Liberal Alliance, 100 West 116th Street, on "The Misconceptions of Anarchism." Commissioner Bingham kept close watch on Emma Goldman, sending men to report her lectures, and telling her that she would be suppressed if she talked inflammatory sentiments.

According to "Doc" Reitman, the so-called "King of Tramps," who acts somewhat in the nature of Miss Goldman's press agent, Commissioner Baker has agreed to the arguments of the Committee of Free Speech, which includes Bolton Hall, the Rev. Alexander Irvine, Eugene V. Debs, Upton Sinclair, and ninety-six others, who are fighting all over the country for free speech, including even that of Miss Goldman.

RUG MERCHANT HELD UP.

Robbed Near Armory, Failed to Appear Against Prisoner, and Is Locked Up.

John W. Hoff, a wealthy rug buyer of Cleveland, got all tangled up with highway robbers yesterday morning in East Twenty-sixth Street, but was rescued without much injury by the police. Then he became so entangled in the police and court rules that he was ordered to the House of Detention by Magistrate Kernochan in the Yorkville Court.

The stories about the case varied widely as the day wore on, the amount lost by Mr. Hoff running from $40 to $1,800, with everything in favor of the smaller amount.

The version of the East Twenty-second Street Station is about as follows: Mr. Hoff and a man who later said he was William Costello, a bartender, of 49 Columbus Avenue, were seen standing in an embrasure of the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory, at Lexington Avenue and Twenty-sixth Street, at 1 A. M. by Policeman Peclet. The policeman thought he saw Costello going through Mr. Hoff's pockets.

Peclet took both men to the East Twenty-second Street Station, where Mr. Hoff said that he had been robbed. His watch a pair of eyeglasses, cuff buttons, and some other jewelry of more or less value were found in Costello's pockets. The bartender explained that he and Mr. Hoff had been drinking together, and that at the time Peclet came up he was attempting to play the part of the cautious friend in taking care of his companion's valuables.

Late in the morning the prisoner and Mr. Hoff were both in the Yorkville Court. The complaining witness was seen in the corridor talking to several men before the arraignment of the prisoner, and when Costello was called to the bar it was found that Mr. Hoff has disappeared. Magistrate Kernochan got the idea that the complainant had been talking to friends of the prisoner. He held Costello in $5,000 bail for examination on Saturday, saying to the prisoner: "I will show you and your friends that you can't tamper with this court."

He then ordered the police to go out and find Mr. Hoff. After a search of several hours he was found and taken back to the Yorkville Court. He hadn't been back to the Park Avenue Hotel, where he has been staying for a week. Mr. Hoff then told his story, which differed from that of Costello and that of the police. He said he was walking down Twenty-sixth Street, when, at Lexington Avenue, three men jumped out of the shadow of the armory and set upon him. He felt some one choking him, and called "Police" as loudly as he could. He felt the men taking off him everything of value that he had, including even his cuff buttons.

His cries for help attracted Policeman Peclet, who ran toward him. Two of the men ran away. Peclet was going after them when he heard a scuffling in the dark shadow. He turned and caught Costello, who was attempting to finish the job.

Mr. Hoff explained that he hadn't been abducted from the court earlier, saying that he had simply gone away with friends in the belief that he wasn't needed after making the complaint to the clerk. The examination of Costello was re-set for to-day.

WOULD SCATTER IMMIGRANTS.

Assistant Secretary McHarg Would Send Them to Good Labor Markets.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., July 21.—A plea that efforts be made to relieve the congested centres of the country of their alien population by distributing them in sections where they could obtain remunerative employment, was to-day made by Ormsby McHarg, Assistant Secretary of the Department of Commerce and Labor, before the Commercial Law League here.

"If this country is to be known as the land of the free and the home of the brave," declared Mr. McHarg, "it must be made free, and the only way it can be made free, is to put into the hands of men the tools of freedom, property. These newcomers cannot acquire it in these congested centres. If we are to protect the institutions of this country we must see that these men, whose voices will be raised in our forums with the voices of our children, shall raise them in praise and not in blame of this country and its laws.

"How strange men are! They deal scientifically with all matters outside of the immediate affairs of men, but when it comes to man himself, childlike and helpless, as he is in many situations, you leave him to shift for himself. You hold up your hands in despair at the business man who ships his goods to a market in an amount greatly in excess of its real need, and you are associated, through your clients, with organizations to prevent such silly mistakes. Yet up to the present time you and your clients have done nothing to prevent such a concentration of such expensive machines as men from going into a glutted market, and there decaying mentally and morally."

It seemed to the speaker that true economy demanded that something should be done to help the great influx of men to secure work outside of the congested centres.

"This requires," he said, "the establishment of specially equipped trains running from such congested centres as New York City to all parts of the country, which will carry these laboring men at actual cost, in order that they may be placed where their services are needed on the farms and in factories. If this were done the railroads would soon be carrying back the product of their labor—and they would, in turn, receive very ample, indirect payment for the very low fare."

WANT FRESH AIR HOME MOVED

Salvation Army Children a Nuisance, Say Long Branch Cottagers.

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., July 21.—Prominent Summer residents at Ocean and Atlantic Avenues have petitioned Miss Eva Booth of the Salvation Army to discontinue the use of the Murray cottage as a recreation place for children in charge of the New York branch of the army. The petition was served on Commander Barker to-day.

The Murray cottage is situated at the corner of Ocean and Atlantic Avenues, and was bequeathed by the owner to the army last Winter as a "home of rest." It is a commodious villa, and occupies a valuable lot.

Early this season a number of army workers with a score or more of children took possession of the premises. Their presence has become offensive to the cottagers, who have informed Miss Booth that the home has depreciated the value of adjoining property. Miss Booth was further informed that for the rental the property would bring a home might be located in some other section of the city.

Among the cottagers who signed the petition in addition to many resident property holders were Mrs. Kate Byron, Mrs. Harriet Russell, Louis James, A. D. M. James, Fulton Russell, Jennie A. Patten, Mrs. L. Lake, Mrs. J. Lawrence Bradlee, Mrs. D. Holland, Miss Kate Holland, Mrs. Standing, W. H. Burton, Theodore W. Moses, Hortense R. Hammerslough, C. R. Hammerslough, Meta E. FINDS CAVES IN ARIZONA.

Prof. Hewett's Expedition Is Led to Them by Indians.

DENVER, July 21.—That mammoth caves, containing caverns large enough to contain a city office building, with natural stone bridges exceeding in beauty and grandeur those of Utah and Virginia, exist in Northwestern Arizona is officially announced by Prof. Edgar T. Hewett, Director of the branch of the School of Mexican Archaeology located at Santa Fé, N. M. Stories of the existence of these wonderful natural caverns have been told by Indians of that section for centuries, but were thought by white men to be merely legends.

Prof. Hewett organized an expedition, which started from Gallup, N. M. After a seven days' journey by pack mule the caves were reached. Indians guided them to the spot and conducted him through the gigantic underground passages. Prof. Hewett, who is in Denver, gave publicity to the story yesterday. He will make another expedition to the caves next Spring.

LONG BRANCH FIRE DOES $80,000 DAMAGE

High Winds Spread Flames and Large Crowds Watch Fourteen Houses Burn.

AUTOS DRAW FIRE ENGINES

Fire Companies Summoned from Nearby Places Helped by Cottagers—No Serious Accidents.

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., July 21.—Thirty thousand persons watched this afternoon eleven fire companies fight a fire which practically destroyed the block between Brighton, Second, and Palmer Avenues, in the west end section of this city, with a loss of $80,000. Fourteen buildings—eight business places and six barns—were completely destroyed, while three other buildings were gutted.

The fire began in the loft of a barn in the rear of the building owned by Joseph Pasinski. It was discovered about 3 o'clock and was then only a trifling affair, but before an alarm could be sounded a strong southwest wind fanned the flames into a blaze, which in an instant leaped to the adjoining stables.

All the buildings attacked except the Coulter Hotel were frame structures and the long drought had them as dray as tinder. It was not till the fire reached the hotel that the firemen had a chance. Its brick walls withstood the blaze a time, and although it was gutted, it prevented any other houses catching.

Fire Chief Moore had not enough men to attack the fire along its entire extent, and he sent in requests for assistance to Asbury Park, Red Bank, Monmouth Beach, and Allenhurst.

The Red Bank firemen were brought over by automobile and their apparatus was towed by a big touring car. In the same way the Asbury Park cottagers assisted the department of that town. Their rapid progress attracted the attention of the passers-by and a great crowd gathered to see the blaze.

As soon as reinforcements arrived Chief Moore posted them on all sides of the fire, and it was prevented from spreading. It was not till 6 o'clock, however, that all danger from it was over. There were no serious accidents, but several firemen were temporarily overcome by heat and two or three of them were cut with falling glass.

From the Pazinski barn it spread to the Moore stables, and then to the stables of the R. B. Moore estate on Second Avenue. The Cliff House, owned by Mrs. Rosalie Moore, next caught, and the flames spread west to a store owned by Mrs. Moore and occupied by Enoch's grocery and a laundry, and to the Pazinski building, in which was a restaurant.

The other buildings burned were Louis Fixler's store, occupied by his restaurant and the Ocean Fishery; Mrs. Sophia Von Hous's grocery store, a large building owned by Mrs. Ellen Gilmartin, in which Jacob Rothstein conducted a hotel and restaurant; Mrs. Mamie Higgins's boarding house, the Hotel Ambleside, conducted by Mrs. Margaret Mathews, and the Coulter Hotel, owned by the Artisan Building and Loan Company of Camden.

The Coulter was erected by William C. Keller of New York in 1902 as a temperance hotel. It did not pay, and was not rented this year for hotel purposes, the only occupant of the building being a caretaker. The first floors of the buildings owned by the Ferns estate, Munroe V. Poole, and Karl Huhn, on the north side of Brighton Avenue, were also gutted.

The loss is estimated thus: R. B. Moore estate, $15,000; Joseph Pazinski, $4,500; Louis Fixler, $4,500; Mrs. Sophia Von Hous, $6,500; Mrs. Ellen Gilmartin, $5,000; Mrs. Mamie Higgins, $7,500; Hotel Keller, $29,000; Ferns estate, $1,500; M. V. Poole, $1,500; Karl Huhn, $1,000.

The buildings were only partially insured. The loss of the occupants of the buildings was above $4,000, and they had little insurance.

LABOR LEADER SHEA GUILTY.

Convicted of Attempting to Kill a Woman and Remanded for Sentence.

Cornelius P. Shea of 222 West Thirteenth Street, former President of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, and until recently Secretary of the local union, was found guilty yesterday before Judge Foster, in General Sessions, of attempting to murder Alice Walsh, a woman with whom he was living, on May 21. He was remanded until Friday for sentence.

Shea met the woman in Chicago, where she was a waitress in a restaurant he frequented, while conducting a strike there, six years ago. The two came to this city and lived together for six years. Everything was peaceful until the woman discovered that Shea had a wife and three children living in Massachusetts. They quarreled and she left him. Four days before the crime, when she came back to pack her trunk, Shea locked her in a room, taking her clothing away to prevent her leaving in his absence.

On the night of the attempt on her life, after returning from a theatre, they quarreled again. Shea, in sudden fury, drew his penknife and stabbed her time after time. He then left her for dead, with twenty-seven stab wounds in her body.

Shea has led strikes in many cities throughout the country, and it is said that labor unions contributed largely to his defense.

WONT LEASE P. R. R. STATION.

Officials of the Jersey Central Say They Have No Such Intention.

Officials of the Central Railroad of New Jersey denied yesterday a published report that negotiations were under way for the lease to that road of the Pennsylvania Railroad's Jersey City terminal as a result of the Pennsylvania connections with the McAdoo Hudson Tunnels.

Vice President W. G. Besler said that no negotiations had been taken up, and W. C. Hope, General Passenger Agent, also denied the rumor that the Jersey Central was contemplating making a claim for a differential on New York to Philadelphia traffic on the ground that it was shut out from tunnel connection with New York City. He said that this idea had not even been considered.

The Central Railroad's tracks approach near Newark within connecting distance of the McAdoo tunnel's proposed extension westward from Jersey City, but it was denied that any attempt had so far been made to obtain connections with the McAdoo route to New York.

Supt. S. T. Abercrombie of the Pennsylvania Railroad, New York Division, said that after the opening of the New York tunnel the railroad would still have use for all its tracks in Jersey City not already leased; that commuters' trains will still be run into Jersey City, and the freight traffic is sure to keep all available tracks in use.

OUTDOES MUNCHHAUSEN.

Australian World-Circling Pedestrian Here with a Great Tale of Adventure.

T. A. Greenlee, an Australian, arrived at the City Hall yesterday with a story of travel and adventure that made the tales of Baron Münchhausen and Jules Verne look like commonplace narratives in comparison.

Greenlee is the sole survivor of a quartet who started to walk around the world from Sydney, N. S. W., on June 1, 1905, for a wager of $75,000, so he says. The conditions were that each man was to start with a penny in his pocket. They were not to beg, borrow, or steal on the journey, which was to be completed by June 1, 1910. His three companions were Jack Jones of South Australia, James Ryan of West Australia, and Dennis McClusky of Victoria, Australia. Two were killed in Africa and the third died of exposure in the Colorado desert, according to Greenlee.

After walking through Australia and Tasmania the quartet shipped for Aden, Arabia, where they landed to walk through Africa to Bulawayo, Rhodesia, a distance of some thousand miles as the crow flies, through an unexplored country.

Greenlee says a savage tribe of negroes called the Sacakunis attacked them. They assegaied Jones and Ryan, and he and McClusky barely escaped with their lives back to the coast. Wandering on, the two went through South Africa, killing lions and other animals on their way, and eventually arrived in England via Ceylon.

They were received by King Edward, so Greenlee avers. He says his Majesty gave him a ring because they were brother Masons, and also because he remembered decorating Greenlee for valor in the Boer war.

After calling on all the potentates in Europe except the Czar, Greenlee and McClusky shipped to China, and from Japan they arrived in America via San Francisco. McClusky was stricken with fever in the Colorado desert and died in Lordsburg, while his surviving companion continued his walk to New York. On the way he met Weston in Kansas City.

Greenlee spoke familiarly of Kings and potentates generally, and expressed his admiration for the Pope, who, he said, gave them a warm welcome. Emperor William, it seemed, was sarcastic, but Greenlee, in a generous spirit, said he believed "the Kaiser meant well." Alfonso of Spain was also kind to the wanderers.

Greenlee says he will remain here a week as the guest of Major Mensch, a mining engineer, at the Astor House. On his trip he says he has worn out 125 pairs of shoes.

HOTCHKISS PUT IN CHARGE.

State Takes Hold of Accident Insurance Company by Court Order.

Supreme Court Justice Erlanger handed down a decision yesterday, the first of its kind under the new law, directing William H. Hotchkiss, Superintendent of Insurance, to liquidate the business of the Traders and Travelers' Accident Company of New York at 99 Nassau Street, and vesting him with the title to all of the property, contracts, and rights of action of the company.

The order further directs that all creditors, policy holders, and certificate holders be enjoined from bringing any suit and from taking any further action in proceedings already brought against the company, or against the Superintendent of Insurance.

The first step in this matter was taken on June 3 last, when Supt. Hotchkiss asked Supreme Court Justice Guy for permission to take charge of the affairs of the Traders and Travelers' under the law passed in May.

Mr. Hotchkiss argued that his department had investigated the affairs of the company and had concluded that the business was being carried on at a loss. He asserted there was a deficit of $1,400, with $800 worth of claims outstanding.

The company was organized in 1883, and on June 8 there were 648 policies in force, with assets of only $600, and liabilities of $2,977. The trouble is said to have come from heavy expenses, augmented by large commissions paid to agents.

According to the co-partnership directory Edward A. Brown is President and George E. Keeler Secretary of the company.

MUSEE TOM ASTRAY.

Pet Cat of the Wax Figures Institution Was Lonesome—His Mistress Away.

Tom, the big black cat, which is the pride and idol of the Eden Musee, in West Twenty-third Street, is lost somewhere in Manhattan. The wax figures at the Musée miss Tom so much that an attempt is being made to locate him through The Times's lost column.

While Tom is attached to the Musée as a whole, he is especially attached to Mrs. Yaeger, whose duty it is to dress the "world in wax," which is the chief feature of the Musée. Tom, while yet in early infancy, was brought to the Musée by Mrs. Yaeger nine years ago, and soon won all hearts. He used to follow his mistress about, rubbing his sleek flanks against such personages as the Czar of Russia, Queen Victoria, Mr. Gladstone, and Theodore Roosevelt. Particularly it is said he loved Mr. Roosevelt.

About two weeks ago Mrs. Yaeger departed for a month's vacation. The shock was too much for Tom. He would not be comforted, his piteous meows lending an additional touch of realism to the Chamber of Horrors. The last seen of him was on Thursday, when he was fed by the man who has cared for him since Mrs. Yaeger's departure.

A reward is offered for Tom's return.

LOST ON THE DIAMOND.

Umpire Emslie Minus a Gold Ring and Some Money.

An advertisement in The Times Lost Column revealed last night that Robert Emslie, umpire of the National Baseball League, lost a gold ring and some money in the game between New York and St. Louis at the Polo Grounds yesterday.

Umpire Kane had charge of the bases and Umpire Emslie was behind the catcher. Just previous to going out on the field Emslie took off his ring and put it in a purse with his money. He thrust this into his trousers' pocket, his coat pockets being used for holding the extra baseballs, and thought no more of it until the close of the game. Then when he wanted the ring, ring, money, and purse had vanished.

A careful search of the grounds and inquiries among the players failed to reveal the missing articles, and Emslie is at a loss to explain their disappearance. A reward is promised to any one who returns them to Harry M. Stevens, Madison Square Garden.

DAKOTA DIVORCE HELD VOID.

Court Therefore Annuls Webb's Subsequent Marriage in This State.

Supreme Court Justice Brady confirmed yesterday the report of a referee granting a decree to Mrs. Carrie Jenkins Webb, sister of the late Tilly Haynes, proprietor of the Broadway Central Hotel, annuling her marriage to Daniel C. Webb. The Webbs were married on Oct. 17, 1900, and Mrs. Webb alleged that her husband had a wife, Adelaide Benjamin Webb, living and from whom he was not divorced.

The testimony showed that Webb went to Wyoming in October, 1899, and remained there nine months in order to get a divorce from his first wife. He obtained the decree on July 6, 1900, returned home and married Mrs. Jenkins.

Counsel for Mrs. Webb alleged that Webb's first wife had been served with the complaint while in Jersey City; that she was not present or represented by counsel in the Wyoming suit, and that under these conditions the decree obtained there is invalid.

The referee found in favor of this contention, at the same time saying that the marriage of Webb and Mrs. Jenkins had been entered into in good faith, both believing in the legality of the Wyoming decree.

WANTS TO KNOW WHY NEW COURT HAS QUIT

Lawyer Welling Complains That Emergency Part of Special Sessions Isn't Working.

VACATIONS, IS THE ANSWER

Meantime Old Part of the Court Is Doing Double Duty—What Newly Created Court Has Done.

Richard Welling, the lawyer of 2 Wall Street, has written to The Times complaining of the closing during the Summer of the new Part II. of Special Sessions, created by special act of the Legislature to deal with the arrears of business in that court. Mr. Welling writes:

To the Editor of The New York Times:

> After a long investigation by the Page Committee appointed by Gov. Hughes, consisting of Senators and Assemblymen and three laymen, the committee reported that in view of the desperate congestion existing in the calendar of the Court of Special Sessions two Magistrates of the First Division be, by act of the Legislature, assigned by the Mayor as assistants to the Justices of the Court of Special Sessions, in order that two parts of the Court of Special Sessions might be in operation and continue in operation until Dec. 1, in the vain hope that the calendar of Special Sessions could be cleaned up, and a special act of the Legislature was passed directing the Mayor of this city to select two City Magistrates to act as Justices of the Court of Special Sessions, and in conformity with the provisions of that act two City Magistrates were so selected. A Court House site was obtained, a chief clerk, clerks, interpreter, and other attendants were appointed, and the second part was in full operation for a period of about three months. On July 1 the entire machinery of this court ceased, the doors were closed, and a two months' recess was taken.
>
> Would it not be of considerable interest to the taxpayers of the city to know by what authority this court, specially created to relieve Special Sessions, has closed its doors and has ceased to perform the duties specially conferred upon it by the Legislature of the State of New York for a special purpose? Are the salaries still being paid, and do all the clerks and other attaches also have a two months' vacation?
>
> RICHARD WELLING.
> New York, July 21, 1909.

According to the preliminary report presented by Senator Page's committee the emergency which called for the creation of an additional temporary part of Special Sessions was the existence on Jan. 28 last of 5,959 untried bail cases, which meant the court was about eleven months in arrears. One of the important purposes sought to be accomplished in the establishment of these Courts of Special Sessions was to insure the speedy trial of misdemeanors.

The arrears began to pile up on the court, the report declared, in 1907. Part of them may be attributed to the increase in the number of cases and to an insufficient clerical force, but they were mainly due to the fact that in the three Summer months the court of 1907 and 1908 sat for the hearing mainly of prison and pleading cases and left the bail cases to accumulate.

This year there has been a change in the system. Part II., the newly created part, has indeed suspended its regular sittings without formal adjournment of its term since July 2 and will not resume regular work till Sept. 13. But Part I., the original Court of Special Sessions, has sat for five instead of three days a week, and has worked both mornings and afternoons instead of mornings only as before. Moreover it has taken all cases as they came along, whether prison, pleading, or bail cases, and has tried to clear up its calendar each day.

As a matter of fact in the few months of its existence Part II. has made great progress in catching up with the arrears. When it came into existence it found nearly 6,000 cases awaiting trial. It was said yesterday at the Clerk's office that there are now only 2,200 cases awaiting trial, and it is hoped that they may be disposed of by the end of November, when the part ceases to exist.

The reason assigned for the prolonged adjournment of the court is the necessity of granting vacations to all the Judges. There are six regular Justices of Special Sessions and two City Magistrates, Joseph Moss and Charles N. Harris, temporarily detailed to the court. To keep both parts and the Children's Court in session seven Judges are required. So that if the Judges are to get their holiday one part must be closed for a time.

Vacations have also affected the clerical staff, nearly all of whom, it happens, have a right to them. When Part II. was organized its clerical staff, with the exception of F. H. Dressel, its deputy clerk, was drawn direct from the office of Part I. or from men who had connection with it in some such capacity as process servers. They have the right to a vacation from the city. Moreover no chief clerk of the Court of Special Sessions has been appointed since Charles Culker was dismissed in the Spring, and all his work has had to be done by Deputy Clerk William M. Fuller of Part I. and Deputy Clerk Dresel of Part II.

Mr. Fuller is now away on his vacation, but Mr. Dressel said yesterday: "The clerical staff of Part II., now that it is not sitting, has been set to help out the clerks of Part I. We have had a very heavy Summer. Last Friday we disposed of 217 cases out of 307 on the calendar. The court convenes at 10 o'clock, works all the morning, and adjourns usually about 5 o'clock. There is a tremendous amount of work for us to get through after that hour.

"In former years, with the court sitting only for a half day, three days of the week, it was possible to allow vacations to the clerks, but now as it is working as long hours and as many days of the week as ever it does, and as it is trying bail as well as prison cases, we were obliged to take the men from Part II. to help out with Part I. Even then it is often 7 or 8 o'clock before they can get away, although they must be here promptly by 9 o'clock in the morning."

UNION LEAGUE CLUB TO SHINE.

Electric Reproductions of the Half Moon and Clermont to Make It Glitter.

Plans for transforming the Union League Club into a gigantic beacon from Sept. 25 to Oct. 9—the time of the Hudson-Fulton celebration—have been approved by the Executive Committee, of which Samuel W. Fairchild is Chairman. The club will shine as never before in its history. The Fifth Avenue side will be given over to an electric reproduction of the Half Moon, and the Thirty-ninth Street part will be just as bright with its representation of the Clermont. As with the Half Moon, the Clermont design will take up all the space on that side of the house.

"In addition," said Mr. Fairchild yesterday, "there will be the largest sign of 'Welcome' which the electric light people can erect, and this will be an invitation to our friends who may be in New York at the time of the celebration. We decided to-day to set aside Monday, Sept. 27, as a reception date, when we shall entertain all the naval officers of our own fleet and of the foreign powers, and also those of our own members who have been in the service or are in it now. The reception is intended particularly for the naval representatives of foreign countries. The work of preparing the building for the designs will begin in a few days."

QUICK RETURN OF A LOST FOB.

The Loser Tried the Lost Column and Is Pleased with the Result.

J. Anekstein of 138 West Seventeenth Street lost his gold fob at the crowded corner of Fifth Avenue and Twenty-first Street at 10 o'clock last Monday morning. The fob was set with diamonds and had pictures inside the medallion. It was not only worth $100, but it belonged to his wife, and Mr. Anekstein valued it highly.

As soon as he discovered the loss he advertised in The Times Lost Column through the Morris Cohen Agency, authorizing the agency to pay $10 reward to any one who brought in the fob. The advertisement appeared yesterday morning. F. Michel of 200 Fifth Avenue had picked up the fob about half an hour after Mr. Anekstein had dropped it. He reported the matter to the Morris Cohen Agency, and Mr. Anekstein had his fob back before the day was out. He has written to express his satisfaction with the results of his advertisement.

MOTHER AND TWO STARVING.

Sympathetic Policeman Find Them in a Doorway and Rescues Them.

Deserted by her husband and turned adrift from her only shelter, friendless and half starved, Mrs. Margaret Kelly was found by a policeman early yesterday morning crouching in a sheltered nook of a big factory building at 281 Borden Avenue, Long Island City. Against her bosom she clasped her four-months-old baby, while half hidden in her ragged skirts was her little girl, Margaret, 6 years old.

They were the picture of despair and wretchedness. The mother shook with fear and weakness and her voice trembled as the policeman stopped to see who they were.

"Yes, yes," she faltered, before the policeman had a chance to speak. "I know I must move on. I can't stay here—even here on this sidewalk. I am always moving on. Oh! if the good Lord would only take compassion on me and let me move on to the grave and take my loved ones with me! There must be peace and rest somewhere; there must be food somewhere, so that my children will not starve. Don't wake the baby. Yes, I'll get up and move along."

She tottered so when she arose to her feet that the policeman caught hold to steady her. He assisted mother and children to the Fourth Street Station and later they were sent to St. John's Hospital, where it was said the baby would probably die.

BUSY EDITOR AT EIGHTY.

Fellow-Employes of Hakon Johansen Give Him an Anniversary Dinner.

In celebration of his eightieth birthday, men of the editorial and typographical departments of Nordstjernan, a weekly paper whose name in English would be The Swedish North Star, gave a dinner last night at Peck's Restaurant in Fulton Street to Hakon Johansen, who was among the founders of the periodical thirty-eight years ago. He was its publisher and owner for twenty-five years. He still serves as its editor.

Mr. Johansen is one of the best known Swedes in the city. He was the founder of the Swedish life insurance society Skandia of New York, is an honorary member of Upsala College at Kenilworth, N. J., and a member of several Swedish organizations in the city. He is still in good health. He sold his paper seven years ago to A. E. Johnson and Charles K. Johansen, his son, its present general manager.

TUNNEL SERVICE EXTENDS.

McAdoo Trains Between the Hudson and Lackawanna Terminals.

The Hudson & Manhattan Railroad Company announced last night that it had decided to begin next Sunday a partial service from the Hudson Terminal Buildings and the Pennsylvania Station at Jersey City to the Lackawanna Railroad Station in Hoboken. The partial service contemplates a train every five minutes except in the rush hours, when there will be none. The partial service, beginning on Sunday, will be available from 7 A. M. to 12:45 P. M. on that day.

On week days, beginning Monday, there will be the same service, but only between 9:30 A. M. and 4:30 P. M., and between 6:45 P. M. and 12:45 A. M.

The company explains that owing to the non-delivery of cars because of the strike at the works of the Pressed Steel Car Company, it is unable to give the extended service during the rush hours on week days, but hopes to have a service throughout the entire day about Aug. 2.
